Articles of Manufacture.

MARBLE & COLOURED PAPER.

H. C. & E. MANN have on hand and for sale, 300 reams Marble and Colored Paper, of various qualities and sizes, including from 40 to 50 reams of Medium and Foolscap Spanish Shaded, a superior article. Also, 30 reams Medium Mottled, a good article for blank books, trunks, fancy boxes, &c. These Papers are generally superior to those heretofore offered, and are manufactured on paper made expressly for the purpose, and put up with 20 perfect quires to a ream. Having been at much expense in the business, and having had many obstacles to contend with, in order to produce an article equal to the "foreign," they respectfully solicit a share of patronage from their friends and the public generally, flattering themselves that they are now able to furnish Marble and Colored Papers, of every variety and quality, as low as can be purchased elsewhere. Orders from every part of the United States, directed to them or to Messrs. CARTER, HENDEE & CO., their Agents, will be promptly executed. A liberal discount made to wholesale purchasers. N. B. Persons wishing any particular shade of colored Papers, are requested to send a pattern when they order.

Wholesale Quill, Water, and Pen MANUFACTORY.
No. 60 William street, New York.

BOOKSELLERS, Stationers, and dealers in manufactured Quills, are informed that the Proprietor, having made permanent arrangements with some of the most extensive dealers in the rough material in Germany, for a periodical supply, has established — will at all times have the best assortment of any other on this side of the Atlantic. Having reduced the article to a scale of prices below what they can be imported at in the dressed state, it is hoped that domestic manufacture may have the preference, as nothing that art can do shall be neglected to have the workmanship superior to any produced here from a foreign market; which, no doubt, the TRADE will admit.—The terms by which the different dressings are known, are, 1st, Double Dutched; 2d, pale and Yellow Clarified; 3d, Fluted Opaque; 4th, Embossed Jackson Quills. The two latter are peculiarly the invention of the Proprietor, and have given, for the time in use universal satisfaction.

DR. HOGAN, continues to be consulted in the most confidential manner as usual, at his offices, 17 Duane st. between Chatham and William-sts, New York, where those afflicted with delicate diseases Scrofula, Piles, old obstinate Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Fever and Ague, Worms, Diseases of the Bladder, Urethra and Kidneys, and all diseases arising from the abuse of mercury, or impurity of the blood, are invited to call. The terrible consequences too often resulting from the use of mercury, need no description—those afflicted with a certain disease may apply to Dr. Hogan with the fullest confidence of having it removed without a particle of mercury, or any other dangerous medicine; his charges are reasonable, and in every case he undertakes, he guarantees a perfect cure without confinement or hindrance from business. It may be necessary to mention for the information of strangers that Dr. Hogan has been professionally educated by some of the most talented medical and surgical teachers, and that he has had considerable practice in extensive Hospitals and public Dispensaries. Separate offices with separate entrances open daily, until 10 P. M. A complete plan of medicine for a certain disease, with directions for those leaving the city, and sent to order on receipt of a reasonable fee to those whose sensitive delicacy is disinclined to an interview. A preventive medicine for a certain disease if used in due time. No letters received unless post paid. The most honorable secrecy observed. july 5

THE NAVIGATION.

We learn from the Poughkeepsie Telegraph of the 9th, that for the four or five days previous to Monday, the weather had every appearance of the opening of spring. The air was warm, and the sky clear; the ice in the Hudson is broken up, and the steam boats now compel their way from New York to Albany, unimpeded by the usual obstructions of the season. We saw some passengers from the boat down on Monday night, who came on board at Hudson, who stated the river was clear of ice as in midsummer. Capt. Crittenden of the steam boat Constellation, who left Albany on Monday, informed the Editor of the Standard that the wharves at Albany were completely covered with water. Jan. 19—The river is completely frozen up.—Editors.

HUDSON RIVER STEAM BOAT ASSOCIATION.

This is the title of the new Company which has lately been formed to run a line of passage boats between this city and Albany. The company is composed of the proprietors of the Old Hudson River Line, of the steam boats Line and Champlain and of the North River Line.—Messrs. J. C. & R. S. Stevens have sold to this company the steam boat North America, for the sum of $80,000, in consideration of which they are to withdraw the New Philadelphia, and not to run any boat up the river for the term of ten years. The new line will be composed of the following boats:—North America, Capt. Crittenden; Albany, Jenkins; Erie, Benson; De Witt Clinton; Ohio, Bartholomew; Champlain, Goodwin; Constellation; Constitution, Hoyt. Three of the above boats are to run a day line, which will start from the foot of Barclay-street; the remainder will be a night line, and will start from Courtland street. The steam boat Novelty has been left out of this arrangement, and will, says the New York standard, probably run in opposition.

MAMMOTH STEAMER.

A most beautiful steam boat christened the "Mediterranean," was recently built at Pittsburgh (Pa.) she is said to be the largest in the United States or in the world. Her length of keel is 175 feet, and on deck 193 feet; breadth of beam 30 ft. and extreme breadth 60 feet; depth of hold 10 ft. 6 inches. The ladies' cabin has connected with it 12 state rooms, each containing two berths; and the gentlemen's cabin 50 state rooms, each containing two berths. These two cabins are separated only by folding doors, which, when thrown open, exhibit to view one vast and splendid room of 121 feet in length, in the decoration of which, all the taste and skill of our city has been displayed. Each state room in the ladies' cabin communicates by doors, both with the cabin and with the spacious guards, and is lighted by panes of brilliant pressed glass, which admit the light, although they exclude vision. In the ladies' cabin we observed a very pleasing embellishment, which, we believe, has never been adopted in our western steam boats—we refer to 12 handsome landscapes and other scenes introduced into the panelling between the doors of the state rooms. The gallery aft of the ladies' cabin is enclosed by folding sashes of window glass, which will protect the fair passengers from the inclemency of the weather, without obstructing their view of the country, by which they are passing. In this gallery, a swing will be suspended, which will afford the ladies exercise and recreation, both much needed in the comparatively long passages on the Ohio and Mississippi. The engine is one of 320 horse power—was constructed by Messrs Stackhouse and Thompson, of this city, and we are told that on its first trial, a few days since, it worked to admiration. The joiner work was executed by Mr. Archibald Mason, of this city. The Mediterranean is owned by Messrs. Knox and McKee of Wheeling, McKee, Clarke & Co., and Capt Wm. Shroder of this city, and will be commanded by the latter gentleman.—Cincinnati Chron.

Matrimonial Miscellany.
NUMBER VIII.
BY CELEBS BENEDICT, ESQ.

MY WIFE'S ANNUAL.

Thrice happy he, who, tied for life,
To one who loves him very dearly,
Receives, from his industrious wife
A little living offering yearly.

What tho' the brats would his lugs,
With noise and din, like Tower of Babel?
How sweet to see them fell in on rugs,
Like olive branches round his table.

To see, with feelings of delight,
The new-born infant on his lap—
To hear it squall, from morn to night,
And cram it's chubby jowls with pap.

Delightful task! the young recruits,
With anxious care to teach their letters,
And gravely show the older shoots
How to behave before their betters.

If, in the cup of wedded bliss,
So many sweet ingredients mingle,
Each merry bachelor will hiss,
And pelt the rogue for living single.

"All over, Sir! and you'll agree
That I've some cause to wish you joy—
As fine a baby as can be—
Another little chopping boy.

I always said 'twould be a lad,
And sure I am I've done my duty;
Lawk! he's the image of his dad!
Now, isn't he a perfect beauty?

And ha'nt he got his mother's eye?
And don't the rogue begin to squeal well?
Now, for a new born baby, I
Never in size beheld his equal."

"Yes, Nurse! the boy is well enough;
And these are things to make us steady;
Of such I now have quantum suff—
For I have eight of them already."

Well can I estimate the worth
Of such delightful morning sweets,
When my beloved wife brings forth
Her "Annual Offering" in sheets.

And she, dear soul, I'm very sure—
For 'tis a point we're both agreed in—
Altho' her parentage was poor,
Is very perfect in her breeding.

It really seems a thriving trade;
And I, of course, must not abuse it;
'Tis hard, when such an offering's made,
That we're [illegible] to refuse it!"

From the St. Louis Free Press
A HUSBAND WANTED.

Miss —— sends her compliments to gentlemen candidates for matrimony.

Gentlemen—In availing myself of the "custom of my country" to present my case to your consideration, I beg leave to tender to you the gratitude of our sex, for your liberality in setting apart to us leap years to make the best speculations we can in the matrimonial market—to which, permit me to say [illegible] favorable hour of which is fast coming to a close, and the most vigilant exertions have been used—yet, I, Miss ——, your humble servant, remain yet undisposed of—oh! oh! Excuse me, gentlemen, for it is too painful and melancholy a reflection for one so beautiful and young, to think of. The season is almost closed—one full sixteen—the rose, though young and tender, yet full grown, and not plucked—the thought is intolerable! A beautiful, amiable, and lovely descendant of a family, though not of the first circle, yet rendered exclusive by transportation, yet respectable. Their daughter's character unsoiled by spot or blemish—sixteen, and not disposed of! Gentlemen, it is too bad—only think of it—

Four years more must roll round their frosts to blight the rose,
Before another leap year will come to a close—

In which time, the rose that is now fit for cultivation, if well husbanded, might yield the tenderest fruit ——. [illegible] and Miss —— not engaged to wife and [illegible] I—I——don't—I cannot say the other, but you know what the children mean, when they say mother. Gentlemen, quit your various speculations upon the phantom that cheats your grasp—chase the fair Venus of the mind, through shady groves, startled by the rustling leaves, [illegible] Miss ——, your humble servant. Look at her by her toilet, and she [illegible] at her bride, [illegible] with a smile on [illegible] pledge, and as the reality. Then why refuse the hand of your [illegible]
MISS ——.

LOVE.

Monday, Nov. 5, a young female, fashionably dressed, named Susannah Laster, whose parents reside in the Edgware road, in great respectability, called at the house of a friend in East st. Marylebone, and requested a little warm water. She mixed what was thought to be salts, and swallowed the draught. The moment she had done so, she pointed to the paper which had contained the drug, and her friend then perceived "Poison—Oxalic acid," marked upon it. She lost no time in procuring assistance, a coach was called, and the sufferer was conveyed to the hospital, where the stomach pump was immediately resorted to with success. After she had partially recovered, she was carried home to her parents, who, on hearing of the circumstances were greatly distressed. The following lines were found in her bosom when at the hospital: —Dear Father and Mother—Richard has proved false to me, and I shall never be happy again—so adieu for ever! Susannah." [We hope Susannah will yet find a better Richard, and live to be grateful.—Eng. Paper.

DEER HUNTING IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Columbia, S. C. Nov. 17, 1832.

Mr. Editor:—

You have desired for publication some details of the various hunts throughout the country, and as no one read with more pleasure, or feels deeper interest in the success of your useful work than myself, I have thought that I could not render you a more acceptable service, than by giving a brief sketch of some of our hunts during the summer's campaign. Our deer hunting commences on the first of August, and usually terminates on the first of this month, when we commence fox hunting. Our party generally consists of that veteran and accomplished sportsman, Major T——, Captain B. F. T——, Messrs. J. R——, J. W——, and Colonel H. and our pack, of ten couple of first rate dogs. Having but few dogs on our side of the river, we usually hunt eight or ten miles on the other side. Various causes delayed our sport this season till the 12th of September, on which day our party rendezvoused at Platt's Springs.—In the afternoon of the same day, three couple of staunch dogs were thrown into cover at Muller's drive. The sonorous tongue of Kate, and the deep challenge of old Canker, soon announced the presence of game.

After an intricate drag of more than a mile,—a burst, and then a clear, loud, and protracted halloo from our driver, proclaimed the news that the game had been roused, and was taking the proper direction. In breaking from cover, the game, a doe and a fawn, separated. The former attempted to pass the stand occupied by Mr. E. and presented herself within thirty yards of him. He fired one barrel, and wonderful to relate, missed her. Making from thence to the stand filled by Colonel H. she rushed out at too great a distance to render his shot certain, [at least one hundred yards,] but near enough to draw one barrel from him also. The fawn followed by a part of the pack, passed out of the drive at a point unoccupied, but too near our veteran Major T. to have any chance of escape. Hastily mounting old Billy, into whose sides he dashed the rowels, he headed the pack, and killed the fawn.

As we occupied an untenanted house, and had brought our own supplies, the fawn afforded a very seasonable addition to our larder, and in the hands of our scientific cook Paul, was served up in magnificent style. The next morning at sunrise, having been joined by Colonel A. and Mr. M. the whole pack was uncoupled, and thrown off at the Big Marsh. Deep in the swamp, old Canker again challenges, and the whole pack rush to his well known tongue. A short drag ensued, and then—what a tremendous burst! A large buck was viewed at Hart's stand, but, smelling the stander, he dashed into the swamp, where, making one or two circles, he broke across the creek, eluding all the party. In about an hour our boys returned with all the dogs, having succeeded in whipping them off. They were then thrown into Red Bank, where two or three starts were made, but no shooting until we reached Rocky Ford, where a fine doe was killed by Colonel H. Returning to dinner, each faux pas was dwelt upon, and the unfortunate subjects that committed them, were reprimanded by our veteran in the true spirit of a practised sportsman. The merits of each dog was commented upon over our venison party, with its concomitants, which you may more easily imagine, than I describe. After "cooling off" we again turned out, up the Big Creek—Five deer were soon roused, one of which was shot by Mr. B. and another by Mr. M. but the principal part of the dogs following the remaining three to the hills, we pursued until dusk but were unable to shoot again. The next morning, having as much venison as we could dispose of amongst our friends, we returned home.

Our last hunt occurred about three weeks since. Having been invited to join some friends, in the vicinity of Lexington court house, to hunt a tremendous buck who had frequently eluded their pursuit, we all assembled at the house of Mr. D. Early the next morning the party moved, to dash Twelve mile creek, leaving the hog back for the afternoon. So soon as the light blast of our horn was answered by the opposite party, our dogs were uncoupled, and thrown into cover. Blue Cap challenged. Two bucks speedily broke cover for the hills. Being hard pressed by the dogs they doubled for the mill pond. Soon after they separated, the whole pack adhering to the larger, a fine snagged buck, who was headed and killed by Colonel H. After a short delay the dogs were again thrown off in the swamp. A doe soon roused, and in breaking cover was killed by Mr. D. our worthy host. The party now formed a junction, and found that Mr. B. F. T. and Mr. W. had killed another fine buck, whom they had caught sneaking from cover. Returning to Mr. D's we were after dinner, prevailed on, 'nothing loth,' to make one more drive for the "Tigun." Mr. I. an amateur, volunteered to drive—and, aided by Mr. D. and the boys, the dogs were turned into cover, close by our rendezvous. At it they went in gallant style—Rinker, Blue Cap, Jasper, Ebony, and Boxer, soon challenged. A short drag was the prelude of a tremendous crash.—The old fellow attempted his old tricks of dogging like a fox, and effectually deceived Mr. F. who raised the view halloo, but being cautioned by Mr. D. to stand fast, we all remained at our posts, whilst the whole pack settled down upon his haunches. In a short time Mr. F. discovered his mistake, by viewing the "old comrade" accompanied by another buck. He fired from a restive horse, and hit the old one with a single shot in the thigh. The deer then separated.—The principal part of the pack made after the wounded one, who, turning in the direction of Mr. D. was shot at by him, but missed. He then turned to Mr. R's stand, who with one barrel sealed his fate.

Boxer, Emerald, Ebony, and Sting, pursued the other buck, and in less than an hour and a half, ran into him at a mill pond, where he was taken from them by the miller, having never been fired at.

Thus closed this brilliant hunt, killing every deer unharbored; and the highest encomiums were elicited from our "veteran," who was almost tempted to challenge, to hunt his party and their dogs against the universe.

It would afford us great pleasure if you would judge their skill personally, by making us a visit during our races, and between racing and hunting, we will endeavor to amuse you. We have run into several foxes since this hunt, the details of which I will withhold until the close of the season, when I may possibly give you another sketch, if you think this worth accepting. H.

THE BLACK FOX.—HUNT DESCRIBED.

On the bank of the Meherrin river, stands the small village of Belfield, consisting perhaps of about a dozen houses—yet they have a ball-room, a race course, and a cockpit, and each in its season well attended. In the vicinity of the village live many country gentlemen, whose hospitality and good living are proverbial.

About the close of the last century, their annual hunt took place on Christmas day; and on that occasion they were joined by some gentlemen from the adjoining counties, Sussex and Southampton. All met at the tavern at Belfield, about an hour before day. Here they found the landlord on the qui vive. He had made for their special benefit a bushel pail of that most delicious beverage called egg-nogg, rich as nectar, and strong as a pump borer. When each man had put some two or three glasses under his belt, they sallied out to rouse Reynard from his slumbers, and disturb those dreams of plunder in which he is said to indulge. The company consisted of about twenty horsemen, attended by a pack of some sixteen or eighteen couple. The ground selected for the chase was on the three creeks, a little below Belfield—amidst large plantations much overgrown with briars, and at intervals intersected by long flat branches, whose borders were in most cases fringed by an almost impenetrable jungle. This ground was selected to afford Reynard some chance for his life, as all concluded no fox could stand long before such a pack.

They drew covert after covert, yet no challenge cheered their anxious ears, until even the most sanguine began to lose hope of a chase. At length near sunrise a young dog gave tongue in a large and thick covert. All the dogs were harked up, and in a few moments the whole pack joined in swelling chorus and went off at a killing pace. The fox led them from covert to covert, and from jungle to jungle, and after a run of about thirty minutes in which they had not been one moment at fault, one of the huntsmen gave the view halloo—at the same time declaring it to be a jet black fox.

Then commenced those friendly banters—some backing the dogs—some the fox—for their club and dinner. After a run of one hour and ten minutes, the fox took up one of those long flat branches. All the huntsmen collected at the head of the jungle, determined to see his sable majesty, when a low grunt in the thicket drew their attention to a particular point, and in a few minutes—out bolted a black pig—going full speed for an adjacent bunch of briars, and shortly after came the whole pack in full cry, thus leaving no doubt that instead of a fox, they had been chasing a pig!

Thus ended the hunt—for all agreed to save the gallant pig, so the dogs were called off, and we returned to Belfield in social enjoyment.—A gentleman of Sussex, then present offered, if that pig could be identified, to run him against any hog in the United States, from one to four miles, for 100*l* Virginia currency. FOXHUNTING.

"Ne'er mind—hark, hark forward! what care we for knocks?
Let those die who must, we will live with the fox;
Let cocktails then falter—but thoroughbreds we
Will stick to the saddle, till ended the spree!"
[illegible]

Northern Neck, Va.—The season is too dry and windy for fox hunting, yet my pack went off late to-day, and drove an old red through my garden which I have reason to believe they killed. By the by, did you ever hear what a narrow chance we had of saving Old Mountain. Mr. Ogle told me he was as famous for cutting dogs as foxes, and frequently he had so annoyed Mr. C. S. R. that he at last directed his neck to be put under the fence—the common mode of executing a condemned dog. Mr. Ogle, seeing he was determined to kill him, asked not only for his life, but for the dog—and in that way preserved a most valuable breed.—Hotspur, by Old Mountain out of Fury, is my best dog, and I have never yet seen him beaten.* Yours very respectfully, T.

* [If any gentleman desires to get rid of a crack hound, that might be entered with fair chance of success in a sweepstakes—the winner to take the next best dog to his own, and an elegant pair couples for the two, to be supplied by the owner of the least valuable entry—the owner of the Sporting Magazine can tell such person where he may find a customer!]

Dec. 2, 1832.

Old Leather Stockings hunts my hounds.—Monday last, they drove an uncommonly large grey fox under a corn at Menokin, and killed him in a run of twenty minutes. Next day they ran a red into a barn on the Salem Hall estate, and killed him in thirty minutes. He weighed nine pounds and three quarters. Ib. T.

Greenville, S. C. Nov. 4, 1832.

Great work at Fox hunting.—From the 1st of October to the 1st of November, I have taken with my pack, thirteen full grown foxes, never losing one that we started, and but a few mornings failing to start.

[Query—Were they not fat grey foxes? We should like to see the same pack stretched after Pollard's old red, in the month of January, leading them off upon a straight run of about fifteen miles—sometimes on a dry road, then over a ploughed field, and again through a flock of sheep. We guess they would find it quite another sort of a thing—good as we have no doubt they are.] Am. Sport. Mag.

DEER SHOOTING.

Mr. Editor:

Perhaps the following may be interesting to some of your readers, if you think so you can give it them in your next:

A friend of mine, Mr. S. K. of New York for a few day's sport after deer, ducks, &c. &c. on the eastern end of Long Island. In one of his excursions (using a double barrelled fowling piece, loaded in each barrel with twelve buck shot, the shot fifteen to the ounce,) on nearing a run of water, he heard a deer coming down directly to him, and in an instant after, another. He allowed the first one to pass, and when the second came opposite him, he fired, and killed her; when the other, turning up for the woods, he levelled her in the most beautiful manner, putting his charge directly in behind her shoulder—thus doing a thing, I believe unparalleled in sporting. A. M. G. B.

* [We have, waiting to be engraved, a beautiful drawing by Rindisbacher, representing Capt. Mason of the Army, in the act of shooting with one hand from on horseback, two deer crossing the Prairie—holding the reins in one hand, whilst he fired off both barrels with the other, his horse, being as he supposed not practised to stand fire.] Ibid.

A gentleman lately called one of his servants, and told him to go to the house of Mr. ——, and give his respects, telling him that his master was unwell, and could not visit him, according to his promise. Wishing to ascertain how the boy would deliver his message, he asked him what he was going to say: to which the boy replied, "Master says he is sick, and can't come to your house to night; and you will please to send him his spectacles!"—Independent Citizen.

DOWN DERRY DOWN.

When I was a sweet little dear of a baby,
Says Mamma to Papa, while they fed me my clothes,
And I fed on pap, "I do wish its nose may be
As sweet as my face and as long as our arms."
Says Papa to Mamma, "let it be at your pleasure,
'Twould rather provoke me to smile than to frown,
Were the pretty witch christened King Nebuchadnezzar,
Or after our little dog 'Down derry down.'"

I do not remember it, but they have told me
They took me to church with the dog at their side,
But first in a mantle all scarlet they rolled me
And thick as some bows that on shoulders abide
Now stood at the altar, god-father, god-mother;
Mamma all in white, Papa all in brown,
When the dog leaping up, their devotion to bother,
Papa had to whistle out "Down derry down!"

The priest asked the name and my mother began,
Sir,
But before she could speak, the dog leaped on her gown,
And so, while the parson awaited her answer,
Kicked at the dog and screamed! "Down derry down."
So the priest shook upon me some dirty cold water,
In spite of my kick, and my yell, and my frown;
Alas for my mother, she christened her daughter
By the name of her little dog "Down derry down."

THE KISS.
A TALE OF TRUTH.

Modesty is a rare, any thing but general among the elite of a very fashionable metropolis; and yet, strange to say, Harry Singleton of the city of London, was, as far as nature and his tailor could make him, the very prince of dandies, and with all, as bashful as a wild duck. The paradox, however, only stood good in love matters; for among his associates, he was the merriest, the wildest, and the most fearless being imaginable; but whenever a woman was in the case, alas for poor Harry. If my lady This, or the widow That, or Miss So and So accosted him, the knees trembled, the heart beat, and the head hung, and in short, he bore the slightest resemblance to nothing on which we would venture a simile, unless, perchance, to the works of a very beautiful time-piece, just about to be defunct, through some ominous, whirring, and unaccountable rebellion of the main spring. This only happened in the case alluded to, for as to Harry of himself making any advances womanward, it was perfectly out of the question—He would as soon have ventured on a tete-a-tete with a Bengal tigress at supper time. Such was his very hopeful situation, some three years since, and much to the dissatisfaction of divers young ladies we could name, (for in sooth he was every thing a young lady could desire,) Harry Singleton was unhesitatingly pronounced, unless by the speculating circle of his acquaintance, an insipient, but very unconquerable old bachelor, at twenty-five.

It chanced one summer mid-day, that a posse of his comrades were bantering him on his feminine peculiarities in the lounging room of a club house in Bond street.

"Well, Harry," exclaimed Sir Edward Newel—"if you and I ever have an affair of honor, I'll fight in my wife's long clothes."

"Then, unless you agree to fight blindfolded," quoth Bob Stanhope, "poor Hal's a gone man; for though your fire should fail, you'll frighten him to death with the petticoats."

"A duel with Harry, eh!" exclaimed Lord Popinjay, "then it must be touching the color of his mustachos, or the cut of his coat, for I'm sure he'll never cross you in a love affair, unless it be to run out of your way."

Thus the song went round, every body adding a note to it, until at length it attained a pitch of discordance, at least as far as regarded our hero's ear, who, at the moment, of course, wished himself in that long desired location of all bewildered gentlemen, i. e. the moon. However, he laughed with the loudest, which was always his way, when the company was confined to the apprentice specimens of humanity, but at length his pride, aye, and perchance his courage too, was aroused by the aforementioned Bob Stanhope, offering to wager Sir Edward a thousand, that Harry Singleton could not be wrought upon to kiss the hand of woman in public, any time within the next month.

Sir Edward, hesitatingly declined.

"Will you give me the chance of the bet," says Hal.

On reflection—"No," replied Bob; "but I'll treble the wager, that you don't transfer the favor from the hand to the lip—the lady to be the first whom chance throws in your way, in the broad street, yonder;—time of test, within the next ten minutes."

"I'll chance a thousand myself on the same wager!" exclaimed Lord Peppinjay.

And I another, says Newell.

And I—
And I—
And I—
And I—
And I, quoth five others.

Which altogether, makes 10,000 guineas," muttered Harry Singleton; "a good price for a kiss, truly; but then suppose I choked on the head of it—what's to be done?—the street is so cursed populous and the sun so horribly glaring, but then the ten thousand.—Gentlemen, your wagers are accepted."

Accordingly, the stakes were covered, and forth sallied Hal, on his adventure, but no sooner had he crossed the threshold of the door, than he wished himself, not in the moon this time, but at the bottom of a river, for the figure which his eye first rested on, and that figure at the farthest, not more than ten paces away, was one of those proud young beauties which even poetry may not define, and which, in fact, nothing but the eye can appreciate.

Would to mercy, Mr. Editor, we could assist your fancy in portraying the carriage and countenance of Miss Mary Hardcastle. Imagine to yourself something a thousand times more stately than the mountain ash, in June, and yet a thousand times more delicately retiring than the form of the water lily under the too rude embrace of an impassioned zephyr,—imagine to yourself every thing that is transcendently sublime in brow, eye, lip, chin, neck, and all therewith connected.—In short, let your mind's eye conjure up an angel, and then, and then, and then you will fall infinitely short of conceiving any thing half so heavenly as the face and form that now blessed, or rather bewildered the gaze of master Harry Singleton.

"Angels and ministers of grace defend us," he ejaculated. "Here I am in a worse situation than ever Joshua was: my face like the theatrical representation of a bloody sun—my knees knocking together like a pair of drum-sticks beating a roll, and all the world looking at me! What a pretty pickle for any reasonable young man!—ten thousand guineas gone to the devil! and the pleasurable anticipation of being laughed, bored, and goaded to death into the bargain."

At this moment he was on the point of rushing back again into the club-house, when his eye caught the triumphant phizzes of Stanhope and his associates leering at him from the window—three more paces and all was ended, when, "courage," says he; "the money's mine," and immediately wheeling on his heel, made his most insinuating conge.

The lady halted.

"Madam, (said Hal, not blushingly, for the crimson of his cheek was at its deepest shade,) this intrusion calls more upon your mercy than your forgiveness. The fact is, I have been deluded into a wager of ten thousand guineas, to kiss the first woman I should meet; but Heavens! little thought I at the time that the test of the wager, would be so much more precious than the wager itself; did I think so, I had not dared to aspire, nor to risk my money. Now, lady, you know the secret; am I to lose the money or not; for, by heavens! not for the riches of Tippo Saib, would I win it per force."

He was silent—the lady looked archly, yet keenly in his eye, and received a confirmation of his tongue. She was no coquette, so mutely consenting,—she arched her lovely neck and closed her lip. The aspirant took the hint, looked his thanks, snatched a not very hasty kiss, bowed, retired, and received his wager.

What very singular things will sometimes follow in the wake of a kiss. Harry, from that moment, was an altered man—from being a bashful dandy, he became an abstracted sloven; and what was still more remarkable, in one who had heretofore shunned every thing in the shape of a woman, he was now eternally lounging along Bond street, and peeping earnestly under every bonnet he could bring his vision to bear upon. His friends thought him mad, possessed, and fifty things; but then, as his mania took an inoffensive turn, and as his hereditary acres were rather involved, they kindly refrained from locating him in an iron waistcoat, or procuring him a billet on the mad-house, and thus, day by day, danced on, every body supposing that our poor hero was touched in the brain, but not one of them tracing the symptoms to his heart.

While thus Harry Singleton was dying by inches in town, Miss Mary Hardcastle was dancing a jig to the same tune in the country. At the time of the kiss we are immortalizing, the young lady, it appears, was betrothed to a certain nobleman, whose by-gone years, as Byron has it, would sound better in money than in love. This part of the business, Mary had paid little attention to, as her father was in the habit of arranging all private family matters, but particularly those connected with contracts and marriage portions. The nobleman, it is true, was sixty, but he was a nobleman, and that took at least twenty years from his shoulders; then he was worth fifty pounds per diem, which covered all other mal-apropos items, and in short, the day of the wedding was fixed, and the bride elect at the time of her introduction to the reader, arranging some preparatory etceteras with her milliner in town. Then came the kiss, and next came what followed.

"I wish Lord Pettifog was in China," says Mary to herself, while returning to the mansion house, "for somehow or other, I begin to feel as if I did'nt care sixpence about him,—White head, red nose, and sixty years!—wonder who that young man in the street was. I really thought he'd have kissed the skin from my ——."

"Bless me, how you blush, girl," says the father, "I suppose you have some wicked thoughts about the wedding in your head."

"No, indeed, Papa; and yet, and yet—"

"What, my dear?"

"Why, Lord Pettifog is very old."

"Yes, but he is a Lord!"

"And so very ugly!"

"Rich men are never ugly."

"Well, Pa, for all that, I wish he was like ——."

"Like who, child?"

"Yourself, sir, to be sure, for I've often heard that Mama married you more for your face than your fortune."

"Why, as to that, pet, there were few young men, but, ahem; all men can't be handsome—and you know what's done may not be undone."

"Well, Pa, I know what I'll think most of after I'm married;—can you guess?"

"Yes, child; pleasing your husband, nursing your children, and scolding your maids."

"You may guess again, sir."

"Haply you'll turn novel writer."

"No."

"I give it up."

"Well, then, I fear I'll be anticipating what strange sort of lives widows live."

The father tried to frown, but he laughed and in an hour after, Mary and her hoary lover were tete-a-tete in the drawing room.

Both sat for some time silently, gazing in each other's countenance; but alas! not with equal admiration.

"How divine in all its proportions," sighed my Lord.

"Mercy! what a contrast," thought my lady. "He was at least a Mercury, or an Apollo; and what is this? Saturn or the ——?" Here she bit her lips and sighed.

Fate, at that moment started in a tear drop to Mary's eye. My Lord sprung forward to kiss the diamond glory from her damask cheek, but Madam, who, at the time was perfectly rapt in somebody whom you may suppose, felt indignant at the untoward intrusion, and swinging an ivory fan aloft, martyred it forever on the bridge of Poor Pettifog's nose.

Earth's greatest poet has sung, that even a "fan is a dangerous weapon in a lady's hand," and this is fully confirmed in the sequel; for my lord might be seen the next moment, glancing like a flash of lightning out of the door, with his ruined protuberance grasped tightly in his red right hand, and it took Betty, the servant maid, nearly half a day afterwards to wash his noble blood out of the carpet.

The next day his lordship tendered his resignation, but from what cause remains a mystery. However rumor has it, that during the night he came to the conclusion that as the lady had proved herself so handy in breaking her lover's nose, she might hereafter feel disposed to borrow her husband's breeches, and so he thought it best to wash his hands clear of her altogether.

Mary, from this day forward felt somewhat relieved, though still beleagured by some twenty tormentors, which is a thing nothing to be wondered at, as in addition to her charms, she had twenty thousand pounds at her apron strings.—However she served them all alike, that is, put her veto on all but her "first love's dream," and went on sighing and pining from day to day, the very counterpart of our acquaintance in London.

Still time kept bustling forward, and in about six weeks from the affair of the nose, brought that merry season on his wing, which all the world, at least all the fashionable world, devote to deluging their stomachs with Spa water in the city of Bath. Singleton, and Mary, of course were among the crowd: the former, on the old speculation of the bonnets, and the other, because it was her father's pleasure, and perchance her own too, on a speculation of hats.

The first, second, and third day rose and set without affording an iota of assistance to either, and yet it were long to tell how many veils, fans, and handkerchiefs were suddenly put on duty, to hide the blushing cheeks of a host of ladies of all denominations, from the inquisitive eye of Master Harry. On the evening of the fourth day, our hero was lounging in the card room, when he was challenged to a game of Cassino by a lady in a low gipsey hat, which completely kept her features in the dark, and gave her the wicked opportunity of seeing every body, unseen herself. Now it was strange that about this lady's countenance Singleton felt no way curious, or the business might have been settled at once, but the fact is, she had been introduced to him that day, closely veiled, by an old friend, and the circumstance of a common place introduction had blunted his curiosity. However down they sat to the table, and the lady soon had the adroitness to disencumber his pockets of three hundred pounds.

"Your evil genius presides to night sir," observed the winner.

"Yes, Madam, but the rogue does it with such grace, and through the medium of such pretty hands withal, that I heartily forgive him his triumph."

"Hem—hem—suppose sir, we change the game?"

"'Twere little use madam, for I'm equally bad at all."

"Nay, I've seen you play one at least with a master's hand."

"Indeed! pray which was it?

"Hazard."

"Surely you labor under some mistake, lady—I never rattled a dice box in my life."

"No sir, but you played with ivories on that occasion, and won ten thousand guineas by a single throw?"

Shall I go on? no—

"O let me say no more,
Gather the sequel from what went before."

And so, friend, taking this hint from Shakspeare, it will be as well to leave the sequel, and all therewith connected to your own fertile supposition. For instance, the recognition—the exclamation—the flutter—the sighs—the blushes—the billet doux—the sunset rambles—the moon light serenades—the—the—the—what you will—and then the wedding. J. M. M.

PRACTICAL PUN.

Mr. Chandler, the editor of the United States Gazette, relates the following anecdote:

Yesterday morning, a colored man was seen wending his way along Ninth-street, bending under the weight of a large basket of beef tallow, but evidently at a loss as it regarded the end of his journey, till discovering on a door plate the name of the writer of this paragraph, he made a dead halt, and set himself to the business of spelling out the name. The correspondence was exact—where was a basket of tallow to be carried, if not to a Chandler's?—so he rang the bell most manfully. The womenkind insisted that no such "stuff" belonged there; but the bearer declared that all was right, the gentleman had paid him, and "he guessed he knew where to carry tallow." It was in vain that they protested that lamps, and not candlesticks, were used in the house, from cellar to garret, the whole was left and there it remains, a monument of "the attractions of a good name."

WATCHES.

It is estimated that 100,000 watches are annually made in France, and about 200,0000 are finished only, the movements of which, are made in Switzerland, chiefly of gold, and 360,000 clicks, in bronze, gilt, or alabaster cases.

Or sigh with pity at some mournful tale;
Or press the bashful stranger to his food—
And learn the luxury of doing good."

New-York:
SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 19, 1833.

"A SECOND DANIEL."

The "Refugee in America, by Mrs. Trollope," as the writer is pleased to style himself, has been reprinted in New York from the London edition, but by whom is left to the supposition of the reader, as the title page is above recording a single word on the subject. However the work is at our elbow, in a brace of neat volumes, and we sincerely recommend every person who wishes to be amused, to procure a copy. "Trollope," in England, is an epithet applied to ladies of a certain class, when even their appearance and conduct, are peculiarly filthy and degrading; and therefore, we think the cognoman in this instance, has been merely applied as being in perfect keeping with the occasion. From what motives the author has wrote we will not pretend to define, but will venture the suggestion, that perchance he is the hireling scribe of some posse of anti-reformers, who begin to find that the former servile cringe of their menials has been changed for something of a republican shrug. Mr. ——, we were going to say Hall, is evidently well acquainted with the customs of this country; but for the life of us, after all his exertions, and tho' certainly under the unqualified influence of the spirit of rancour, we cannot see that he has perpetrated anything to be wondered at. True he has discovered that Yankees are fond, very fond of money. Is he an Englishman, and has he never known that to be among the peculiarities of John Bull? Again he finds fault with the maltreated language of our country. We would ask the gentleman if he has ever travelled from Cockneyshire to Liverpool and what he has heard on the way? Something worse to be interpreted "we guess" than his world of "pretty considerably well calculated" and so forth; and then he has made us very unfairly father the bastard expressions of his own country, by incessantly putting into the mouths of his characters such expressions as the "man what got," and "I'd be after," &c. &c. which has time out of mind been associated with English orthography and caricature.

The book is a novel, and the story not without some share of interest, particularly to an American, who cannot but be edified at finding his neighbors and his country so unsparingly abused for things which himself and all the world had given them enviable credit for. The hero of the book is a young lord, who stabs a poor man in England with a knife, for killing his, the lord's dog, and then flies to America for protection; and yet for what purpose we cannot rightly understand, having supposed that a peasant killing a nobleman's dog, and a nobleman killing a peasant's self, were crimes of an equal class; at least the subservience paid by the law, to the aristocracy of Europe when a peasant's in the case, affords any thing but a contradiction to our ideas. Well then, our hero of the knife comes to America and begins his travels, and being, according to the writer, a very suspicious looking character, he excites the curiosity of a host of boat boys and coach drivers, which naturally incurs the writer's utter abhorrence, who, perchance, when in America himself had some very polotic reasons for keeping all personal matters in the dark. A very ludicrous escape being effected from a broken down stage, the party, (for his lordship was well attended,) after unheard of disasters and trials, make their way good over a distance of two miles, and are very hospitably received by a farmer, and his family whose good services they requite by putting them all topsy turvy, and depriving the children of their beds. This of course calls forth another burst of wonder, that a poor farmer, in a wild part of the country, where he was wholly unused to see company, should not live in all the luxury of an Eastern prince, and have bowers, arcades, and washing baths, for the reception of his guests. But the place at which Master Trollope appears to be peculiarly horrified is when two famishing and deluged servants are invited to sit at the fire and eat their suppers in the same apartment with their master, even when discovered that it was the only apartment where a supper and a fire could be procured in the house; so the story goes on—full of abuse and slander where Americans are concerned, until at last the young gentleman returns to his own home, where he is provided with a wife, instead of a halter, and retires to his family mansion to end his days in peace.

As we said before, we recommend this book to the reader. If he is a foreigner, he will know the better how to appreciate it, and if an American, tho' at first he may be disposed to feel a little chagrin at the scurrility so plenteously heaped on his beloved country, yet when he has thoroughly analysed it he will feel grateful to the writer for having gone so far, and laugh himself into good nature over his ingenious tissue of great big nothings.

PAMPHLETS, POSTAGE AND PRINTERS.

The editors and publishers of papers are heavily taxed by the pamphlets, reviews, magazines, and literary journals generally, which they receive, by the payment of exorbitant postage. Newspapers, it is true, are sent to them postage free, from which they can extract the news of the day, for the benefit of the public: while pamphlets, and the whole range of literary publications, are charged at 2 1-2 cents for a small sheet, which renders the procurement of them by the publishers of papers, a matter of heavy expense. Now as the object of those who framed the law exempting newspapers from postage, was, to circulate intelligence, by facilitating its obtainment by publishers: and as the beneficial effect of this "is so well known to all," is it not equally important, that reviews and magazines of useful knowledge, embracing in their varieties "the whole circle of the sciences," should also be freed from all postage, at least to editors and publishers of papers, that the intellectual wealth they contain, may be scattered over the whole face of our country, by republication in newspapers, carried into every house, and illuminate the members of every family? Minds now in comparative darkness, will thus be enriched with light, "and knowledge which is power," be every where communicated to our fellow-citizens. Let Congress attend to this matter, as they are the guardians of the public weal, and let them remove this envious duty on periodicals, which brings the mind into obedience to avarice, and leaves it ignorant on account of the heavy expense of becoming wise.

PRESIDENTIAL PORTFOLIO.

We find on our table portraits of all the Presidents of the United States, lithographed and published by Bisbee, 95 Canal street. They are designed either for framing or a portfolio. This series as a whole is the most beautiful and perfect of any, we believe, that has appeared in this country. They are of a uniform size about 10 by 12 inches, and are undoubtedly the finest specimens of lithography ever produced in the United States. The portrait of the elder Adams, is, if our recollection serves us, an admirable likeness.

We inadvertantly omitted to credit to the "Stage Register" several travelling items in our first page, under their appropriate department.

NATURAL MAGIC.

We briefly noticed in our last "Letters on Natural Magic addressed to Sir Walter Scott, by Sir David Brewster," recently published by the Messrs. Harpers. We have seldom read a more learned, instructive and amusing work.

First we have the illusions which affect us through the eye very largely treated of. The appearance of spectres to the brain or nervous system in a diseased or extraordinary excited state,—the case of persons who are insensible to particular colors,—the tricks of necromancers with concave mirrors,—the magic lantern and phantasmagoria,—the spectre of the Brocken, and the Fata Morgana,—are included, among many other things, under this head. The illusions depending on the ear, including the modern exhibition of the invisible girl, ventriloquism, the effects produced by the voice on glasses, the phenomena of echoes, &c. are considered in several of the following chapters. Then come two highly interesting chapters on mechanical feats and contrivances,—such as remarkable exertions of strength, the automata of the ancients, Degennes's mechanical peacock, Vaucanson's duck, which ate and digested its food, Baron Kempelen's famous automaton chess-player, Duncan's tambouring machine, Babbage's calculating engine, &c. Lastly, the volume closes with a rapid survey of several of the most remarkable wonders of Chemistry. The art of breathing fire, that of walking upon red-hot iron, Aldini's incombustible dresses, the spontaneous combustion of human beings, the effects of the nitrous oxide, or laughing gas, and the very curious subject of certain elastic gases which the author himself has discovered in the cavity of gems, are some of the topics among which the reader is led on through this department.

The following is, we think, the most extraordinary of all the author's statements. The work, it is to be recollected, is addressed in the form of letters to Sir Walter Scott:"

'One of the most remarkable and inexplicable experiments relative to the strength of the human frame, which you have yourself seen and admired, is that in which a heavy man is raised with the greatest facility, when he is raised up at the instant that his own lungs and those of the persons who raise him are inflated with air. This experiment was, I believe, first shown in England a few years ago by Major H., who saw it performed in a large party at Venice under the direction of an officer of the American navy. As Major H. performed it more than once in my presence, I shall describe as nearly as possible the method which he prescribed. The heaviest man in the party lies down upon two chairs, his legs being supported by one and his back by the other. Four persons, one at each leg, and one at each shoulder, then try to raise him, and they find his dead weight to be very great, from the difficulty they experience in supporting him. When he is replaced in the chair, each of the four persons lay hold of the body as before, and the person to be lifted gives two signals by clapping his hands. At the first signal he himself and the four lifters begin to draw a long and full breath, and when the inhalation is completed, or the lungs filled, the second signal is given, for raising the person from the chair. To his own surprise and that of his bearers, he rises with the greatest facility, as if he were no heavier than a feather. On several occasions I have observed that when one of the bearers performs his part ill, by making the inhalation out of time, the part of the body which he tries to raise is left as it were behind. As you have repeatedly seen this experiment, and have performed the part both of the load and of the bearer, you can testify how remarkable the effects appear to all parties, and how complete is the conviction, either that the load has been lightened, or the bearer strengthened by the prescribed process.

"At Venice the experiment was performed in a much more imposing manner. The heaviest man in the party was raised and sustained upon the points of the fore-fingers of six persons. Major H. declared that the experiment would not succeed if the person lifted were placed upon a board, and the strength of the individuals applied to the board. He conceived that the bearers should communicate directly with the body to be raised. I have not had an opportunity of making experiments relative to these curious facts; but whether the general effect is an illusion, or the result of known or new principles, the subject merits a careful investigation."

JOHNSTON'S SCRAPS.

We have before alluded to the 4th number of the humorous caricatures of our American Cruikshanks Johnston, to whom we are indebted for a copy, and some half dozen hearty laughs into the bargain. On one page we have illustrations of Mrs. T. and on the opposite extracts from her "exquisite" pen. We have a view of that celebrated lady embarking with her luggage and suite for America—of her "going the Ole Og"—of "one of her favorite amusements on the Ohio"—enjoying "the good society" of this country—visiting Trenton Falls—of the English mode of "Helping the distressed," recommended by Mrs. T—of the effect produced by Capt. Hall's Book in America, as described by Mrs. T. We commend our clever friend Johnston's Scraps to all who would "laugh and grow fat" at the expense of a trollope.

"Sic transit gloria mundi."

C. F. Daniels, Esq. the able editor of the Camden Journal, has retired from the station he has long filled with so much credit to himself and the periodical press generally, which we regret the more, as no one is able to supply his place.—"We ne'er shall look upon his like again." Mr. Daniels in his valedictory, says, "It has been a continued source of ungenerous imputation upon me, that I am a 'Yankee,' and therefore an alien enemy in South Carolina. I feel much pride in pleading guilty to the enormity of birth-place, but the inference is as false as it is unmanly. No native son of Carolina need love her better than I do—none has ever spoken to her citizens with more honesty of purpose or more integrity of intention."

We would suggest that Mr. D. might find it to his advantage to come on to the North.—"The world is wide," and were he to establish a paper here, conducted with half the ability he has ever discovered, we predict most confidently, a patronage commensurate with his distinguished literary attainments.

N. P. WILLIS.

Nicholas Lackfee, Esq a writer of "whimwhams and opinions" in the Cincinnati Chronicle thus speaks of our travelling friend:—Willis, he says, is a lively, but not a deep writer. To continue my favorite figure, his is a small ship, well painted, sails fast, but does not carry many guns. I like his prose better than his poetry. The former seems to be the natural overflowing of an observing and imaginative mind. The latter is formed upon the namby-pamby model of Wordsworth and others, which is now going out of date.

DON JUAN.

The following sublime stanza, is from this licentious but much abused poem of the immortal Byron:—

"Between two worlds life hovers like a star,
'Twixt night and morn, on the horizon's verge.
How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we shall be!—The eternal surge
Of time and tide rolls on, and bears afar
Our bubbles; as the old burst, new emerge,
Lashed from the foam of ages; while the graves
Of empires heave but like some passing waves."

The Easton, (Pa.) Democrat says:—"In Northampton there are seven papers published, and all of us is getting rich!" What happy fellows these Northampton Editors must be—considering their grammar.

LITHOGRAPHIC MUSIC.

We cheerfully call attention to the very extensive catalogue of vocal and instrumental music published by Mr. Riley, 29 Chatham street, consisting of songs, duets for the voice, glees, trios, catches, guitar music, sacred do., variations, rondos, lessons, airs, marches, waltzes, cotillions, dances and overtures, flute, military music, &c. &c. Mr. Riley is in constant receipt of all new musical publications, which are reprinted in a neat and beautiful manner, and afforded at a very low rate.

We shall hereafter notice the publications of this establishment as they appear.

QUIXOTING FOR KNOWLEDGE.

Two or three mornings ago a prodigy of goodness and intellectual research was exhibited gratuitously at the bar of the police. A young gentleman who had had his first living or his "starving in Wales," was brought up before the justice to answer to his name, and to account for his first appearance in the watch house, and his first practice at the bar of the police.

It seems this "child of light," who by dint of birches aiding the operations of brains, had taught "the young idea how to shoot" in Rensalaer County in this State, who had reaped the reward of fame as a most enlightened pedagogue, had grown weary of the glories and the greatness of his vocation, and finding by the entrance of a thought one day into his head, by accident, that the Scriptures, of which he had before heard, were not entirely intelligible to his expanding capacities; conceived the bright idea of having all the gnarled and knotty passages explained, so that all might understand their import. With this view and under this most sublimated impulse he became intellectually theological, and proclaimed himself a student in "the school of the prophets." But his zeal for knowledge outstripping his judgment, and neither books nor men in the land of his location having the power to satisfy his mental hunger, he left his closet home, and strayed to Schenectady to consult the Rev. Divine who presides over the College there. Not finding his thirst yet sated by the fountains of wisdom from which he drank, he came to New York to ferret out the truth, to tell of the lights that had dawned upon his mind, and to ask of or to instruct others, touching the mysterious import of the Scriptures, aided by the reason of his powerful mind. In his explorations after truth, at night in the street, his discernment led him to hold converse with a watchman, for the purpose of detecting the knowledge that he coveted. His first scripture enquiry was about the watch house and its apartments; and from information and the friendly aid of his new schoolmaster, he was speedily ushered into its gay and fashionable apartments, and comfortably provided for, with a soft, silken sided plank for a bed. There he slept in glorious hope, and dreamed of the future, and in vision pondered o'er the past. He had now reached the acme of knowledge, and like a true son of Eve he had plucked and tasted of its fruit. In the morning, the light of heaven began to dawn upon the outward casements of his mind; his doubts of the excellence and beauty of a watch-house were removed; the text and context of confinement appeared wonderfully plain, his natural and inspired curiosity were abundantly satisfied, and his researches into the knotty and complex passages to and from the Police Office, were fully understood. A watchman had opened to his mind a fond of knowledge, which divines could not accomplish; and the police justice, like another Rhadamanthus, pronounced in favor of the perfection of his purpose and his corporeal enlargement, and let so much light into the enquirer's mind, that he went away quite delighted with the beauty of the scene; glorying in the magnitude of his discoveries, and convinced that night is more propitious of intellectual light than the day; that the nocturnal lamp beams more brightly than the sun: and that he is now so completely accomplished with one night's hard study, that he can teach watch house theology and Police Office scripture, as well as any professor, in any university of his native or adopted land.

BOARDING HOUSES, MATRIMONY, &c.

Messrs Editors,

Observing in the Mirror of the 15th instant a rather severe attack on Boarding houses, and deeming a 'brother bachelor' unfortunate in his selection, I think something is due to the many, very many good ones to be met with, and to the gentle department of hosts in general. Now it is my good fortune to be in a Boarding house replete with comfort and convenience—the Mistress, a lady—the Boarders, gentlemen—the servants, respectful, and always suiting their manners to their situations. The table, the very type of the seasons, in all the paraphernalia of substance and delicacy, and all served up in a way that would do credit to the private family of a prince. Besides, there is no squabbling for places—fighting for dishes—yawning from ennui, or laughing for spite. In short, every one does as he wishes, and all are perfectly social, happy, and contented.

Another comfort which I must not omit, is, that the ladies and gentlemen have separate parlors, so that a man by contrast can prepare himself for the pleasures of either. For instance, if business speculations, politics, an early nod, or a late glass be his wish, he may seclude himself in the one—and, if 'the flow of soul' be the object, he may enjoy it to the climax in the other. However there is one thing in the latter, rather tormenting on occasions, some of the ladies being married, they have no mercy on us poor bachelors for not following their example; and those damsels who have not yet paid their devotions to Hymen, appear by their sighs, nods, and dimples to chime in with the sentiments of those who have been in the market before them. But all is settled by a song, for we are well supplied with music both vocal and instrumental, and thus between laughter and melody, rational conversation and current chit-chat, we close the labors of the day.

But to obviate the difficulty complained of in some measure, it is quite fashionable for gentlemen to furnish apartments separate from their boarding houses, and some of our acquaintance have them very comfortable, as much so, as poor devils (bachelors,) can have them, (for a bachelor is, I think, a useless member of society, although I am a confirmed one myself.) Messrs. Editors do as I have not done, get married, for rest assured, there is no real happiness without a wife. A wife is man's sheet anchor for life, and one he can look to with confidence, for consolation and support; in prosperity she is his partner in pleasure, enjoying with him the fruits of his labor—in adversity, always his consolation and support. I have known wives influence their husbands to act and accomplish what to them seemed hopeless undertakings. One memorable instance is vivid in my recollection at this moment. The husband was a man of strong mind, but without cultivation, he had by close application and strict economy accumulated a competency—the wife was talented by nature, with great cultivation, and far superior to most of her sex. Becoming somewhat embarrassed, his mind sunk under it, he gave up all for lost—and he was a beggar, forsaken by his friends, and even by those for whom he had done the most. The wife, when told the exact situation of affairs, (I was the first to tell her, and never shall I forget it,) roused him from his despondency, and encouraged him to act. He met his creditors, they cheerfully complied with his requests, and done more, they granted him facilities which he did not ask, to carry on his business, he met all his engagements—recovered his credit and his spirits, and all by the influence of his wife; but go to man, I did not intend to write a letter on wives, but boarding-houses.

Dec. 26. A BACHELOR from necessity.

Literary Notices.

LIBRARY OF HEALTH

Porter of the Family Journal proposes to publish a Family Library of Health: popular medicine: science of human life; prevention and cure of diseases. The first volume is announced to appear in February, and will be devoted to the interesting and important subject of eating and drinking, embracing a consideration of the qualities of the different articles subservient to the nourishment of man; and such rules and precepts relative to their use and abuse as shall enable the reader to guard against the injurious effects of excess; without, however, inculcating the necessity, or even propriety, of a painful and rigorous abstinence. Now as travellers are peculiarly given to eating and even drinking, we commend the forthcoming volume to their notice. Our friends of the Atlantic, Congress Hall, the American, Niblo, and some others we could name, would doubtless find it a matter of economy to distribute copies of the work about their "Epicurean Temples" for the use of their boarders.

"CASPAR HAUSER."

This is a translation from the German, of Anselm Von Feuerbach, President of the Court of Appeal, &c. and contains an account of an individual kept in a dungeon, separated from all communication with the world from early childhood to about the age of seventeen. The little volume affords an opportunity for observation of the highest interest to the curious, the physiological philosopher, the moralist, the religious teacher, the physiologist and physician, which must be as rare as the name which afforded it. Caspar Hauser was first found near one of the gates of Nuremberg, on the 26th of May, 1828. Whence he came, or by whom he was brought, he could never tell, after he had acquired the power of speech. When found he was unable to walk or speak, and was in a state of almost absolute imbecility. He was taken into the care of the police, and by a judicious course of treatment, in time acquired a good degree of control of his physical powers, a competent command of language, and was able to communicate all he knew of his life. It forms a neat 18mo of 178 pages, from the press of Messrs. Allen & Ticknor.

AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Messrs. Stimpson & Clapp, have recently published in an 8mo volume of 200 pages, a history of the American Revolution, first published in London under the superintendence of the society for the Diffusion of Knowledge. It is a brief, concise and distinct narrative of the principal events of our revolution, and possesses an uninterrupted continuity of interest from first to last, without embellishment, communicating facts in which persons of all ages have an interest. And although it was written in England, and by one of her sons, it does not exhibit an undue partiality for the cause of that country. It is, on the whole, a valuable production—simple enough for the young and substantial enough to gratify the mature and cultivated. It is on sale at Peter Hill's, in Broadway.

WALDIE'S LIBRARY.

Thirteen numbers have appeared. Temple's Travels in Peru, which closes with the last number, is a work of considerable merit. The next two numbers are to contain "Lafayette and Louis Philippe during the revolution of 1830, or a history of the events and men of July, by M. Sarrans, jr."

The American Annals of Education and Instruction, for January, have been received. Wm. C. Woodbridge continues to conduct it with his usual ability. It contains six appropriate articles on the various interests of education. Among them we noticed an interesting piece from the pen of Mrs. Lydia Huntley Sigourney, of Hartford, on the Female College of New Grenada. Allen & Ticknor are the publishers.

Swords' Pocket Almanac, Churchman's Calendar and Ecclesiastical Register for 1833, contains all the usual matter of an Almanac, and a great variety of information useful to Episcopalians generally. Swords, Stanford & Co 152 Broadway, publishers.

SPORTSMAN'S DICTIONARY.

Mr. E. V. Nickerson, 4, South Gay street Baltimore, has issued proposals for publishing a work of this name in twelve monthly numbers, each containing eighty pages 8vo. of closely printed matter, on the finest medium paper, embellished with copperplate and wood engravings; the whole to form when complete, a splendid volume of 960 pages with engravings by the best artists, in a superior style of excellence.

A work of this nature is calculated to do much good, and the want of one has long been felt by the sporting community. We believe "Johnson's Sporting Dictionary" has not been republished in this country, and as Mr. Nickerson will probably take this as a guide for his own, we confidently anticipate a work that shall commend itself to the wants and interests of the public generally, and of sportsman in particular.

Travelling Varieties.

NEW YORK AND ALBANY.

The mail line of coaches on both sides of the Hudson, commenced running since the river has been closed. A stage leaves the office, York House, No. 5 Courtlandt street, daily at 8 o'clock, A. M. for the east side, and another at 7 o'clock A. M. on the west side, and both arrive in Albany at 2 o'clock, P. M. of the next day. Mr. Wm. B. Jeques, the intelligent and gentlemanly agent, is indefatigable in his exertions to render every thing connected with this mode of conveyance pleasant and agreeable. Fare $10.

EAGLE HOTEL.
RICHMOND, VA.

Mr. Thomas C. Powell, formerly of Petersburg, Va. has recently taken the Eagle Hotel at Richmond, Va. Those who have experienced the comforts and enjoyed the luxuries of the establishment at Petersburg while under his management, will deem any expression of favorable opinion from us superfluous. Really we know not the man better calculated to afford the traveller every thing desirable, than our worthy friend Powell.

RAIL ROADS.

Lowell and Boston—From the annual report of the directors, recently presented in the Senate of Massachusetts, it appears that above half the length of the whole road has been excavated, that rails are laid for a single track, about 3800 feet from Miller's Creek to Winter Hill, and that contracts are made for a speedy completion of the remainder, including bridges and stone for the same across Charles River. Seven assessments on stock have been made, amounting to $300 a share; the whole amount of receipts since the commencement of the undertaking, is $300,050; amount expended during the same time, $325,755.

PROVIDENCE AND BOSTON.

Surveys have been made and a preference given to the route through Sharon. A section of the road has been located from Watt's mill in Roxbury to the summit level in Sharon. There have been four assessments amounting to $17 on a share—the whole amount received is $63,190; the whole amount expended is $18,669 28.

We are indebted to the editor of Sylvester's Reporter for the following extract of a letter received from a passenger on board the steamboat David Brown, Capt. Pennoyer, on her last trip—the writer is an old sailor, consequently his opinion may be relied on.

"After a delightful passage of only three days, I arrived here on the 25th. If you or any of your friends come to the South, take the steamboat. It is not only the quickest conveyance, but I am satisfied the safest. I never made a more pleasant trip up the North River, and I can assure you not a passenger on board lost a meal from seasickness. Although the weather was uncommonly fine during the passage, there was a heavy swell south of Cape Hatteras,—but owing to the rapid progress of the boat we did not feel it; she appeared to be riding on the top of a sea the whole time, and the motion was so little that it would not upset a Champaigne glass."

STEAM CARRIAGE.

It is the opinion of some of our most experienced and intelligent citizens that McAdamised roads with steam carriages will, in a few years, become the most popular and best mode of travelling. A steam carriage, it is said, can be propelled 25 miles per hour on one of these roads, and as easily managed as a stage coach. The proprietors of the Boston and Salem stage line are about making the experiment.

The Troy Turnpike and Rail Road Company, (see proceedings of a meeting of Directors, in another column,) have determined to construct a McAdam road over the route contemplated for the construction of a rail road. Since it has been ascertained by respectable and satisfactory experiments, that carriages can be conveniently propelled by steam power upon McAdam roads, and even upon well constructed Turnpike roads, the utility of rail roads, in the public estimation, has become very much lessened. A rail road is of necessity, a monopoly. A such, it is obnoxious to many objections. No vehicles can be used upon it, but those belonging to the Company. In proportion as it engrosses the carrying business along any given route, it depreciates the value and usefulness of horses along that route, and works an injury to many private individuals. Along the line of a rail road, we can never expect to see a thickly settled population. There is no inducements in all the business to invite the erection of stores, warehouses, dwellings, or farm houses. The route of a rail road will ever be comparatively an uninhabited route.

Upon McAdam and other Turnpikes, people will always struggle to locate themselves, and to construct their domiciles. Farmers can travel over such roads in their own vehicles, or they may avail themselves of public conveyances, at their option. Their own horses are not excluded, nor are they compelled to convey their produce to market upon company carriages.

For the benefit of Troy, as well as for the adjoining country, it is to be hoped that the efforts of the Troy Turnpike and Rail Road Company, will be followed with abundant success.—Troy Budget.

Sorsby's Repository and Livery Stable—at Augusta, Geo.—A subscriber in that city requests us to call attention to this establishment. He says, "in no section of the union can be found an establishment equal to this, and not elsewhere superior. It presents at first view quite a bold appearance, pleasantly situated in a convenient part of the city. Its internal arrangement is spacious, and in every particular kept in the most cleanly manner." We are fortunate and gratified to state, that the proprietor is eminently well calculated to manage such an establishment.

New-York Police.
REPORTED FOR THE TRAVELLER AND TIMES.

PLEASURE SUSPENDED.

The other morning two very genteelly dressed ladies were brought before the Police court, with velvet hats and waving plumes, silk dresses and Merino shawls, charged with a breach of the peace. From their pretty faces, and gentle looks, it seemed impossible that the charge should be true; but yet there stood the grim messengers of the ladies' disgrace, to testify to the convivial sins they had committed, and for which they were thus untimely and impolitely arraigned. It seemed that—there is a famous house of entertainment kept at 34 Orange street, where belles and beaux, the strong and the fair had assembled, to kill dull time by whirling in the giddy dance, and to have their souls melted into tenderness and love, by dulcet harmony created by the fiddle's squeal. There they were, warmed with mirth and exercise, and wine, flirting and capering, and pleasuring according to the best and brightest rules of art, when their sanctuary was invaded by the guardians of the night, on complaint of some of the neighbours, whose uncultivated ears were stunned and insulted, by this sweet assemblage of vocal and instrumental sounds. Soon the sport which promised so well was interrupted; soon the fiddle and the dance were silenced; soon consternation sat on lovely faces, and the divinities of lust and beauty, of revelry and noise, were dethroned, and despoiled of their immortality. The ladies almost fainted, the gentlemen valiantly fled, and the ball room was soon a scene of terror and desolation, over which the destroying angels of the law had passed.

In this grand entry of the watch, most of the inmates, taking example from Xenophon and Moreau, safely effected their retreat through the "defiles of the black forest" of night, and by ways unknown to an invading foe. These hapless daughters of degenerate virtues, were taken captive; the one a sprightly widow with a husband living, whom she had deserted, and the other a virgin of 1—, whose moral health had been damaged, by an imprudent exposure to the noxious damps of night. There they stood before the bar and wept out pearly tears. But justice was inexorable; its harsh features could not be softened into forgiveness by the melting tribute of a flood of tears. And in despite of promises and pleadings, and in disregard of the delicate infirmities of their virtues, this widowed wife, and this unequivocally virtuous virgin, were sent to prison, only to be relieved, when an angel of mercy, in the shape of bail, should appear.

RISING IN THE WORLD.

A handsome young man of blooming twenty-five, having left for a season his business of selling dowlas, diapers and tape, in the hey day of his feelings went to a drinking establishment in Park Row, about the "noon of night," and there, after indulging his appetite with brandy, cock tail, punch, and oysters, concluded it best to immortalize himself, by enacting a row. Waiting until all the inmates had sunk into the sweet oblivion of repose, he proceeded to demolish a screen, and to destroy a lamp that stood staring him too full in the face; then to complete the whole, crushed into a mass of ruins two or three chairs, and in token of joy for his triumph over the peace and good order of the place, hurled a decanter at the bar keeper's head, which fortunately missed fire, and broke in pieces against the wall of the apartment. The menacing attitude assumed by the invader of tavern keepers' rights, not comporting with the ideas of propriety of the manufacturer of drink, he went to the door and civilly calling the watch, requested him to take the gentleman into custody. The grim messenger of angry justice appeared, but lo! the hero of the wreck was gone; but upon close examination of the premises, he was found with his feet and legs sticking out of the butt end of the kitchen chimney, into which his body was crammed and which he had endeavored to ascend, like a sweep of the first water. The sweep was unceremoniously abstracted and borne to the watch-house, and in due season ushered into the dread presence of the court begrimmed with dirt, and blackened with soot, which had destroyed the pristine beauty of the outward man, whose face was marred with black streams of grief and whose earthly garb was changed in all its physiognomy, from white to black, from fair to foul. There he stood like the Ethiop, on a broken pyramid, blighted and blasted in his feeling and his look. Soon the complaint was preferred, the dreadful charge made out, and the young hero of the chimney bottom, ordered to find bail in the sum of $200, or go to Bridewell, there to meditate on the events of the past night, and to sip sweet comfort from the reflection of his virtuous deeds.

All persons who can defer their laughter until a convenient time, should be taken to the Humane Society, as extraordinary cases of "suspended animation."

AND LO! SHE WEPT.

A lady, with a very pretty face and form, who lives in Elizabeth street, was brought up charged with the ugly vice of drunkenness. The dear creature, with all the grace of modesty and connubial love about her, walked out at night with her gracious lord to reconnoitre some rooms for the purpose of establishing a housekeeping copartnership. The air was damp and cold, her husband left her for a moment to ar the head of Thomas street, that she might trip it lightly home alone, not protecting the varied ills that might befal her well-beloved. Weary and thirsty, she very naturally stept into a Porter house to rest and warm her pretty feet, conceiving that a drop of good liquor would do no harm, she took the tempting glass of cordial, very cordially applied it to her ruby lips, and drank it off. The precious draft was rapid in its operation; her feet refused to perform their office with their wonted alacrity, her head reeled, and with difficulty she moved in salient angles along the streets, with more sail than ballast on board. The watchman came and kindly hailed the chase; then took her into custody and bore her off, a pretty prize, to the watch-house, "far from her husband's side, from friends and home." She slept not. In the morning she appeared before the court, little less than Seraph fallen, but the child of penitence and grief. The big tears coursed down her lovely cheeks, and bathed her blushes in a briny flood. She wept aloud. Her artless tale of truth was quickly told; the Bench melted into mercy, and with a charge from his Honor, the Magistrate, of "daughter go thy way and sin no more," she departed to seek her sorrowing husband and her home, and to tell of the mortifying effects of house-hunting at night, when interspersed with cordial, porter houses, watchmen and Police courts.

Facts and Fictions.
ORIGINAL AND SELECTED—IN PROSE AND VERSE.

MARRIAGE MARKET.

Does any man want to buy a wife now-a-days? then we recommend him to apply at once to our neighbor, Jas. Watson Webb, of the Courier, who has very appositely classed his marriages as market articles in last Saturday's paper. We wonder what security would be given to a man on the quality of the purchase; but we suppose, that being "sharp articles," a body must take one just as he would a razor, on chance. At all events, it is a pleasure to trace the progress of new discoveries and inventions. There was a time when all "marriages were made in heaven," but now it appears that a man may have the affair settled at the office of the Courier and Enquirer; but a truce with admiration. We sincerely wish that all the young ladies may find very good purchasers, and that the young gentlemen will make the most of their bargains.

Hot Punch has declared war against Brandy and Beer, and now usurps the appetites of a majority of the bibbers of our city. The persecuted liquors talk of purchasing cannon and small arms, in imitation of the nullifiers, to compell Mr. Punch to remove the restrictions on their use, or else to recede from the confederacy of drinks.

Petersham coats and Spanish Cloaks are in actual hostility among the bon ton. A jury of tailors is to be summoned to try the question of right to supremacy, to which the woolen men are about to add a clause in favor of the party that requires the most cloth.

We are indebted to Mr. Charles Bowen the enterprising publisher of the "North American Review" for the first number of the "Select Journal of Foreign Periodical Literature." We are compelled to defer the further notice for our next weeks publication.

One morning this week, we had plenty of as pure mud as e'er was seen, and weather as mild as April's sunniest smile. In the evening, we had cold, as frigid as January in anger could enact, with a snow storm and frost work to boot. Since then, earth has become as hard hearted as a Turkish Pacha, and Old Boreas blusters about as the principal master of ceremonies.

After a long sleep of death, Tom Thumb who once figured so largely in the world, as is said, has come to life, and reappeared in the shape of a handsome Bowery carriage drawn by as pretty a pair of nags as need be seen. Tom is every day in Wall street performing his itinerating manoeuvres, with a skill and dexterity unsurpassed.

A number of pretty ladies, it is said, who have sighed in single blessedness from their birth till their eighteenth year, are about to appear before the hymeneal altar, to deposit their names in favor of those of swains of their choice.

It has been discovered that children of five years old, can dance as well as old bipeds, and several of that age are taking lessons under the superintendance of their mothers, and cheered on by the kisses of their fathers. The little angels like the sport, and already think of catching admirers.

ONE LETTER.

A letter was lately found, in which one friend spoke so freely of another, that it led to an irreconcileable quarrel. "I am surprised," observed W. "that such bitter hostility should arise out of so trivial a cause." "I am not at all," replied J.; "it is quite natural, for a friend becomes a fiend if you drop a letter."

A VETERAN.

Among the visiters at the seat of government the National Intelligencer has announced Gen. Absalom Peters, of Connecticut, and father of Alderman Peters, of New York. General P. is 79 years old, but his years sit lightly upon him, and he can say with old Adam, in "As you like It,"—

"Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty.
* * * * * * *
My age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly."

WHAT WILL MRS TROLLOPE SAY?

On board of a new splendid steamboat recently built to navigate the Mississippi, the proprietors have erected a swing to amuse the lady passengers.

The New York Journal of Commerce says, that the Washington Globe recently printed "countless Demagogues" for the Countess Douagers.

A LIVING.

A gentleman one morning asked a little barefoot boy what his mother did for a living? "She eats cold victuals," was the reply.—Lond. Athenæum.

A London Journal, in the hurry of describing a recent duel, assures us that "the Captain wounded his adversary in the fleshy part of the thigh-bone." That was one way certainly of getting to "the marrow of the matter."

MARRIAGE EXTRAORDINARY.

On Monday last a woman without arms was married at Bury;—the ring being placed by the bridegroom upon one of the bride's toes. This indeed is taking a wife in toe-toe "for better for worse."

DISCHARGING A LOAD.

A bachelor in Essex county, who was somewhat stricken in years, had been for some time enamored with one of the maiden sisterhood, but could not muster courage enough to 'pop the question.' One day he was resolved to make the attempt. He accordingly went to the house, knocked at the door, and his lovely dulcinea made her appearance. After a mutual nod, the following laconic dialogue ensued. 'Do you want to change your condition?' 'No.' 'Nor I either.' And turning about, our bachelor concluded the conversation, with 'Thank heaven, I've got that load off my stomach.'—Dedham Adv.

Sporting Varieties.

NEW YORK SPORTING MAGAZINE,
And Annals of the American and English Turf.

It is with unfeigned pleasure we announce to the American Sporting world that Cadwallader R. Colden, Esq. so long and favorably known as the author of those able essays, &c. over the signature of "An Old Turfman," is about to take the field on his own account. His prospectus was enclosed to many of our subscribers last week, on a separate sheet, and we regret it was received too late for any notice in that paper.

It would, indeed, be a work of supererogation to compliment the talent, ability or industry of Mr. C.; his productions in the Turf Register of Mr. Skinner are so well known and appreciated that any encomium from us might be deprecated. We invite attention to his prospectus, and can assure its readers that it must more than realize their expectations. The engravings are to be beautifully colored, and will be larger than any ever issued in a similar periodical.

Those of our subscribers in the country who were not served last week, will find the prospectus inclosed in our paper of to-day, when all may have an opportunity of canvassing its claims for that extensive patronage which its merit shall command.

We give one extract from Mr. Colden's "Salutatory," with the single remark, that no gentleman in America is so well qualified as himself, or who will do more justice to the arduous undertaking on which he is about to commence. He says, in conclusion:—

What has been done well by others, we will endeavor to do better, and if being perfectly conversant with matters relating to the turf, and the racing stable, hunting, fowling, and fishing, acquired by attentive observation and practice, during upwards of thirty-five years, added to no small share of veterinary knowledge, can qualify the editor for the task, he may look forward with a prospect of success.

To render the work most acceptable to those, the "wise who on exercise depend," and who deem such "the best kind of physic for mending a bad constitution and preserving a good one,"—"to staunch and true sportsmen," will be his pride. Such the editor hopes will not be the more inclined to withhold their patronage, should they, in the editorial productions, recognize the pen of

AN OLD TURFMAN.

SAFETY GUN.

We have frequently alluded to an improved gun, recently patented by the Rev. Mr. Somerville of Scotland. We think Mr. Lewis, 3 Wall-street, has a double-barrell on this principle, which we commend to the attention of our sporting friends. The following article from the London Spectator, will be found to give an interesting description of its advantages over those in present use:—

Somerville's Gun.—Two more instances of death by gun accidents are recorded in our columns. We were about to express our regret, for the hundredth time, that such disasters—which, to us at least, appear of so easy prevention—should be ever and anon occurring; and to call the attention, once more, of such gentlemen readers and shooters as have no fancy for shooting themselves or their friends, to Somerville's safety gun; when our eye lighted on a letter from a correspondent, begging for a description of that most useful invention, and asking where it was to be procured, and what it cost. We can only answer the latter part of this question by stating, that Mr. Somerville has a patent; that he resides in Scotland; and that in Edinburgh unquestionably, but we should think also in London, the gun may be got—we ourselves have seen it in London, but in the hands of a sportsman. Its cost above that of a gun of the ordinary kind, we cannot estimate exactly, for much of the price of all guns depends on the name of the maker and the fashion; we believe, however, that the cost of adapting the safety apparatus to a common gun is some four or five pounds.

Mr. Somerville, we have said, resides in Scotland; he is in fact, the worthy clergyman of a rural parish a few miles from the modern Athens; and his happy invention—for so we truly deem it—was first suggested by the tragical death, from a gun accident, of the son of one of his own parishioners. It is not easy to describe the safety-gun without a diagram; but the principle of it is easily understood. In firing the ordinary gun, one motion is alone necessary, and hence its danger. A twig, a stone, a snake even, any force sufficient to draw the trigger, puts the life of the owner of the fatal instrument, and of his companions, in jeopardy. To discharge the safety gun, two motions are required, one with the left and the other with the right hand; the left must release the guard spring, the right draw the trigger, before the gun can possibly go off—hence its safety. The simultaneous application of two separate forces to two separate points, for the production of a common effect, naturally indicates, as Mr. Somerville, in the printed description of it well well remarks, not by accident, but a combination and forethought, that exclude the idea of accident.

Now, it must not be imagined by sportsmen that the spring, operated on by the left hand, impedes in any degree the free use of the gun. The very contrary is the case. As the safety gun cannot possibly be discharged until the moment when the bearer desires it, it is always cocked. Thus, instead of losing time, the spring saves time. The sportsman has but to raise his weapon to his shoulder and fire; whereas, with an ordinary gun, he must first cock, then level, then fire. The perfect practice of the spring may be acquired by the dullest dog that ever followed a four footed brother, in an hour or two's exercise in his room, previous to taking the field; and in a very short time—a day or two at most—the left hand is found to perform its function with the same readiness of instinct that the forefinger of the right hand performs its functions.

Soon after the safety gun was invented, Mr. Somerville circulated, among a few of those who were content to try its efficacy, a set of queries; among which were the following:—

"1st. Can you kill more game with Mr Somerville's gun than with an ordinary one?"

"2d. How much more, calculating on the whole season, and taking into the account accidental rises?"

The answers were uniform: we need only quote those of Lord Hopetoun's gamekeeper:—

"1st. Certainly I can kill more game with Mr. Somerville's gun than with the old.

"2d. I think Mr. Somerville's gun gives a superiority of one fourth absolute safety, and 25 per cent. of additional execution."

Is any thing else required.

THE TURF.

The Derby 1833.—General Grosvenor has sold Glaucus to Mr. Ridsdale for 3,000 guineas: he is now at eight to one for the above stakes, and first favorite.

The late Derby.—It will be recollected that the last Derby was won by Mr. Ridsdale's St. Giles', and that Mr. Vansittart's Perion ran second—that Mr. Vansittart claimed the stakes on the ground that St. Giles was disqualified, altho' it had been decided both by the Stewards of the Jockey Club and the Stewards of the races that he was qualified. Law proceedings were talked of, but subsequently a more satisfactory and sportsmanlike course was agreed on, viz. by referring it to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Earl Stradbroke, and Mr. C. Greville, than whom more honorable or competent arbitrators could not possibly have been selected. The 'cause' was heard at Newmarket on Saturday morning, and a verdict given in favor of Mr. Ridsdale, 'damages 2675l.' There cannot be two opinions as to the propriety of settling turf disputes by reference to persons conversant with the laws and usages of racing; the case just noticed clear enough to sporting men, involved a question of pedigree that would have puzzled the 'twelve judges.' It has been concluded in a manner highly creditable to both parties.

DANGEROUS DAIRY-MAID.

A short time since a man named Ward, in a fit of despondency caused by the rejection of his passion by a dairy-maid, poisoned himself.—Though none can accuse the dairy damsel of being for Ward, it must be owned she had little of the milk of human kindness in her disposition.

HEDGFORD.

To many of our readers we can offer nothing more acceptable than the following compilation by "An Old Turfman," of the Pedigree and Performances of the beautiful imported horse Hedgford. Our intelligent friend with great industry and research has consulted the past volumes of the English Stud Book, the Racing Calendar, "Annals of Sporting," &c with Pick's Turf Register, and the public may rest assured of its accuracy in every particular.

We earnestly recommend it to the attention of all Breeders of fine horses, and our friends of the Turf generally, as giving the only correct account of a horse whose stock is destined to become, for beauty, speed and bottom, second to none on the American Turf.

PEDIGREE.
[See General Stud Book, vol. 3, page 114.]

Miss Craigie (dam of Hedgford) bred by Major Bower in 1811, got by Orville, her dam Marchioness by Lurcher, out of Miss Cogden, by Phenomenon—Young Marske—Sylvio.

1817 b. f. Angelica by Amadis } Maj. Bower.
1819 b. f. Miss O'Neil by Camillus (dam of Belvidere, by Blacklock.)
1821 b. f. —— by Octavian, Mr. Allen.
1822 gr. c. Androgeus, by Minos, Mr. Houldsworth.
1823 b. c. —— by Amadis,
1824 b. c. —— by Filho da Puta, } Mr. Mytton.
1825 br. c. Hedgford, do.
1826 Slipped 2 colts, by do. Mr. Lacey.
1827 br. c. Birmingham by do. Mr. Beardsworth.

Thus it will be seen that Hedgford is own brother to Birmingham the winner of the great St. Leger stakes at Doncaster in 1830, beating Priam and 26 others, considered the best horse in England of his years. Birmingham and Priam, at that day, being the two best horses in the Kingdom.

Filho da Puta, sire of Hedgford, was got by Haphazard, his dam Mrs. Barnet, by Waxy—Woodpecker—Heneel by Squirrel—Principessa by Blank.

Haphazard, sire of Filho da Puta, and paternal Grandsire of Hedgford, was got by Sir Peter Teazle. His dam Miss Hervey, by Eclipse. Her dam Clio, by young Cade—Starling—Bartlet's Childers—Bay Bolton—Byerly Turk—Bustler.

Orville, sire of Miss Craigie, and maternal grandsire of Hedgford, was got by Beningbrough. His dam Evelina, by Highflyer, out of Termagant, by Tantrum—Sampson—Regulus—Marske's dam.

Many of our readers, who attended the Fall Races over the Union Course, near this city, will recollect Hedgford, whose exhibition called forth many encomiums from the throng assembled, on his fine appearance. He was imported by Mr. William Jackson, who purchased him in England of the Earl of Derby. His departure was noticed in the English Sporting Journals as a national loss. The friends of the Turf here are under many obligations to Mr. Jackson, for introducing a Racer, so celebrated for his size, beauty, and blood, as to render him a truly valuable acquisition to the American sporting world.

Hedgford is a rich brown, five feet five inches high, with a beautiful star in his forehead, elegant head and neck, unequalled shoulders, fine back and loin, good thigh, and fine bone and sinew. He is said by those who have seen them, to be an exact likeness of his brother Birmingham, the most successful and profitable racer of his age, in England; and they both bear a strong resemblance to their sire Filho da Puta, who has produced more winners than any other horse of that kingdom. Hedgford is descended not only from the most popular line, but from the most successful coursers in England. His grandsire Orville, won the great St. Leger in 1802. His sire, Filho da Puta, won the great St. Leger in 1815; and his full brother Birmingham is at this time at the head of the turf in England—having won more money than any other horse of his day, even exclusive of the great St. Leger, which he won in 1830.

Hedgford has gone to the "Old Dominion," under the patronage of John C. Goode, Esq. and will stand at his house the ensuing season five miles south of Boydton, within a mile of Taylor's Ferry, on the Roanake, Mecklenburg, Va. where, we trust, the lovers of fine horses will avail themselves of the present opportunity to improve the breed of these noble animals.

EXHIBITION OF MR. MEEKS.

On Monday evening, Mr. Meeks, of Albany, will give an exhibition at Tammany Hall of the Science of Pugilism, in which several distinguished amateurs are expected to take part. His testimonials as to character, combined with his known excellence in this department of the "manly sciences" will go far to ensure him a warm reception from the "Fancy" of this city. Tickets may be had at the principal hotels and at Tammany Hall.

TO CURE DRAM DRINKING.

Dr. Lettsom mentions a person who usually drank 12 drams a day, but being convinced of his approaching misery took the resolution to wean himself from this poison. He always drank out of one glass, into which he daily let fall a drop of sealing wax. By this means he had 12 drops less of spirit every day, till at length his glass being filled with wax, his habit was cured.—Mirror.

AND LO! SHE WEPT.

A lady, with a very pretty face and form, who lives in Elizabeth street, was brought up, charged with the ugly vice of drunkenness. The dear creature, with all the grace of modesty and connubial love about her, walked out at night with her gracious lord to reconnoitre some rooms for the purpose of establishing a house-keeping copartnership. The air was damp and cold, her husband left her for a moment near the head of Thomas street, that she might trip it lightly home alone, not predicting the varied ills that might befal his well-beloved. Weary and thirsty, she very naturally stept into a Porter house to rest and warm her pretty feet, conceiving that a drop of good liquor would do no harm, she took the tempting glass of cordial, very cordially applied it to her ruby lips, and drank it off. The previous draft was rapid in its operation; her feet refused to perform their office with their wonted alacrity, her head reeled, and with difficulty she moved in salient angles along the streets, with more sail than ballast on board. The watchmen came and loudly hailed the chase; then took her into custody and bore her off, a pretty prize, to the watch-house, "far from her husband's side, from friends and home." She slept not. In the morning she appeared before the court, little less than Seraph fallen, but the child of penitence and grief. The big tears coursed down her lovely cheeks, and bathed her blushes in a briny flood. She wept aloud. Her artless tale of truth was quickly told; the Bench melted into mercy, and with a charge from his Honor, the Magistrate, of "daughter go thy way and sin no more," she departed to seek her sorrowing husband and her home, and to tell of the mortifying effects of house-hunting at night, when interspersed with cordial, porter houses, watchmen and Police courts.

MARRIAGE MARKET.

Does any man want to buy a wife now-a-days? then we recommend him to apply at once to our neighbor, Jas. Watson Webb, of the Courier, who has very appositely classed his marriages as market articles in last Saturday's paper. We wonder what security would be given to a man on the quality of the purchase; but we suppose, that being "sharp articles," a body must take one just as he would a razor, on chance. At all events, it is a pleasure to trace the progress of new discoveries and inventions. There was a time when all "marriages were made in heaven;" but now it appears that a man may have the affair settled at the office of the Courier and Enquirer, but a trace with admiration. We sincerely wish that all the young ladies may find very good purchasers, and that the young gentlemen will make the most of their bargains.

Hot Punch has declared war against Brandy and Beer, and now usurps the appetites of a majority of the bibbers of our city. The persecuted liquors talk of purchasing cannon and small arms, in imitation of the nullifiers, to compell Mr. Punch to remove the restrictions on their use, or else to recede from the confederacy of drinks.

Petersham coats and Spanish Cloaks are in actual hostility among the bon ton. A jury of tailors is to be summoned to try the question of right to supremacy, to which the woolen men are about to add a clause in favor of the party that requires the most cloth.

We are indebted to Mr. Charles Bowen the enterprising publisher of the "North American Review" for the first number of the "Select Journal of Foreign Periodical Literature." We are compelled to defer the further notice for our next weeks publication.

One morning this week, we had plenty of as pure mud as e'er was seen, and weather as mild as April's sunniest smile. In the evening, we had cold, as frigid as January in anger could enact, with a snow storm and frost work to boot. Since then, earth has become as hard hearted as a Turkish Pacha, and Old Boreas blusters about as the principal master of ceremonies.

After a long sleep of death, Tom Thumb who once figured so largely in the world, as is said, has come to life, and reappeared in the shape of a handsome Bowery carriage drawn by as pretty a pair of nags as need be seen. Tom is every day in Wall street performing his itinerating manœuvres, with a skill and dexterity unsurpassed.

A number of pretty ladies, it is said, who have sighed in single blessedness from their birth till their eighteenth year, are about to appear before the hymeneal altar, to deposit their names in favor of those of swains of their choice.

It has been discovered that children of five years old, can dance as well as old bipeds, and several of that age are taking lessons under the superintendance of their mothers, and cheered on by the kisses of their fathers. The little angels like the sport, and already think of catching admirers.

ONE LETTER.

A letter was lately found, in which one friend spoke so freely of another, that it led to an irreconcileable quarrel. "I am surprised," observed W. "that such bitter hostility should arise out of so trivial a cause." "I am not at all," replied J., "it is quite natural, for a friend becomes a fiend if you drop a letter."

A VETERAN.

Among the visiters at the seat of government the National Intelligencer has announced Gen. Absalom Peters, of Connecticut, and father of Alderman Peters, of New York. General P. is 79 years old, but his years sit lightly upon him, and he can say with old Adam, in "As you like It,"—

"Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty:
* * * * * * My age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly."

DISCHARGING A LOAD.

A bachelor in Essex county, who was somewhat stricken in years, had been for some time enamored with one of the maiden sisterhood, but could not muster courage enough to "pop the question." One day he was resolved to make the attempt. He accordingly went to the house, knocked at the door, and his lovely dulcinea made her appearance. After a mutual nod, the following laconic dialogue ensued: "Do you want to change your condition?" "No." "Nor I either." And turning about, our bachelor concluded the conversation, with "Thank heaven, I've got that load off my stomach."—Dedham Adv.

Sporting Varieties.

NEW YORK SPORTING MAGAZINE,
And Annals of the American and English Turf.

It is with unfeigned pleasure we announce to the American Sporting world that Cadwallader R. Colden, Esq., so long and favorably known as the author of those able essays, &c. over the signature of "An Old Turfman," is about to take the field on his own account. His prospectus was inclosed to many of our subscribers last week, on a separate sheet, and we regret it was received too late for any notice in that paper.

It would, indeed, be a work of supererogation to compliment the talent, ability or industry of Mr. C.; his productions in the Turf Register of Mr. Skinner are so well known and appreciated that any encomium from us might be deprecated. We invite attention to his prospectus, and can assure its readers that it must more than realize their expectations. The engravings are to be beautifully colored, and will be larger than any ever issued in a similar periodical.

Those of our subscribers in the country who were not served last week, will find the prospectus inclosed in our paper of to-day, when all may have an opportunity of canvassing its claims for that extensive patronage which its merit shall command.

We give one extract from Mr. Colden's "Salutatory," with the single remark, that no gentleman in America is so well qualified as himself, or who will do more justice to the arduous undertaking on which he is about to commence. He says, in conclusion:—

What has been done well by others, we will endeavor to do better, and if being perfectly conversant with matters relating to the turf, and the racing stable, hunting, fowling, and fishing, acquired by attentive observation and practice, during upwards of thirty-five years, added to no small share of veterinary knowledge, can qualify the editor for the task, he may look forward with a prospect of success.

To render the work most acceptable to those, the "wise who on exercise depend," and who deem such "the best kind of physic for mending a bad constitution and preserving a good one,"—"to staunch and true sportsmen," will be his pride. Such the editor hopes will not be the more inclined to withhold their patronage, should they, in the editorial productions, recognize the pen of

AN OLD TURFMAN.

SAFETY GUN.

We have frequently alluded to an improved gun, recently patented by the Rev. Mr. Somerville of Scotland. We think Mr. Lewis, 3 Wall-street, has a double-barrell on this principle, which we commend to the attention of our sporting friends. The following article from the London Spectator, will be found to give an interesting description of its advantages over those in present use:—

Somerville's Gun.—Two more instances of death by gun accidents are recorded in our columns. We were about to express our regret, for the hundredth time, that such disasters—which, to us at least, appear of so easy prevention—should be ever and anon occurring; and to call the attention, once more, of such gentlemen readers and shooters as have no fancy for shooting themselves or their friends, to Somerville's safety gun; when our eye lighted on a letter from a correspondent, begging for a description of that most useful invention, and asking where it was to be procured, and what it cost. We can only answer the latter part of this question by stating, that Mr. Somerville has a patent; that he resides in Scotland; and that in Edinburgh unquestionably, but we should think also in London, the gun may be got—we ourselves have seen it in London, but in the hands of a sportsman. Its cost above that of a gun of the ordinay kind, we cannot estimate exactly, for much of the price of all guns depends on the name of the maker and the fashion; we believe, however, that the cost of adapting the safety apparatus to a common gun is some four or five pounds.

Mr. Somerville, we have said, resides in Scotland; he is in fact, the worthy clergyman of a rural parish a few miles from the modern Athens; and his happy invention—for so we truly deem it—was first suggested by the tragical death, from a gun accident, of the son of one of his own parishoners. It is not easy to describe the safety-gun without a diagram; but the principle of it is easily understood. In firing the ordinary gun, one motion is alone necessary, and hence its danger. A twig, a stone, a snake even, any force sufficient to draw the trigger, puts the life of the owner of the fatal instrument, and of his companions, in jeopardy. To discharge the safety gun, two motions are required, one with the left and the other with the right hand; the left must release the guard spring, the right draw the trigger, before the gun can possibly go off—hence its safety. The simultaneous application of two separate forces to two separate points, for the production of a common effect, naturally indicates, as Mr. Somerville, in the printed description of it well well remarks, not by accident, but a combination and forethought, that exclude the idea of accident.

Now, it must not be imagined by sportsmen that the spring, operated on by the left hand, impedes in any degree the free use of the gun. The very contrary is the case. As the safety gun cannot possibly be discharged until the moment when the bearer desires it, it is always cocked. Thus, instead of losing time, the spring saves time. The sportsman has but to raise his weapon to his shoulder and fire; whereas, with an ordinary gun, he must first cock, then level, then fire. The perfect practice of the spring may be aquired by the dullest dog that ever followed a four footed brother, in an hour or two's exercise in his room, previous to taking the field; and in a very short time—a day or two at most—the left hand is found to perform its function with the same readiness of instinct that the forefinger of the right hand performs its functions.

Soon after the safety gun was invented, Mr. Somerville circulated, among a few of those who were content to try its efficacy, a set of queries; among which were the following:—

"1st. Can you kill more game with Mr Somerville's gun than with an ordinary one?"

"2d. How much more, calculating on the whole season, and taking into the account accidental rises?"

The answers were uniform; we need only quote those of Lord Hopetoun's gamekeeper:—

"1st. Certainly I can kill more game with Mr. Somerville's gun than with the old.

"2d. I think Mr. Somerville's gun gives a superiority of one fourth absolute safety, and 25 per cent. of additional execution."

Is any thing else required.

THE TURF.

The Derby 1833.—General Grosvenor has sold Glaucus to Mr. Ridsdale for 3,000 guineas: he is now at eight to one for the above stakes, and first favorite.

The late Derby.—It will be recollected that the last Derby was won by Mr. Ridsdale's St. Giles', and that Mr. Vansittart's Perion ran second—that Mr. Vansittart claimed the stakes on the ground that St. Giles was disqualified, altho' it had been decided both by the Stewards of the Jockey Club and the Stewards of the races that he was qualified. Law proceedings were talked of, but subsequently a more satisfactory and sportsmanlike course was agreed on, viz. by referring it to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Earl Stradbroke, and Mr. C. Greville, than whom more honorable or competent arbitrators could not possibly have been selected. The "cause" was heard at Newmarket on Saturday morning, and a verdict given in favor of Mr. Ridsdale, "damages 2675." There cannot be two opinions as to the propriety of settling turf disputes by reference to persons conversant with the laws and usages of racing: the case just noticed clear enough to sporting men, involved a question of pedigree that would have puzzled the "twelve judges." It has been concluded in a manner highly creditable to both parties.

DANGEROUS DAIRY-MAID.

A short time since a man named Ward, in a fit of despondency caused by the rejection of his passion by a dairy-maid, poisoned himself.—Though none can accuse the dairy damsel of being for Ward, it must be owned she had little of the milk of human kindness in her disposition.

NEW-YORK TRAVELLER AND SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

HEDGFORD.

To many of our readers we can offer nothing more acceptable than the following compilation by "An Old Turfman," of the Pedigree and Performances of the beautiful imported horse Hedgford. Our intelligent friend with great industry and research has consulted the past volumes of the English Stud Book, the Racing Calendar, "Annals of Sporting," &c with Pick's Turf Register, and the public may rest assured of its accuracy in every particular.

We earnestly recommend it to the attention of all Breeders of fine horses, and our friends of the Turf generally, as giving the only correct account of a horse whose stock is destined to become, for beauty, speed and bottom, second to none on the American Turf.

PEDIGREE.

[See General Stud Book, vol. 3, page 111.]

Miss Craigie (dam of Hedgford) bred by Major Bower in 1811, got by Orville, her dam Marchioness by Lurcher, out of Miss Cogden, by Phenomenon—Young Marske—Sylvio.

1817 b. f. Angelica by Amadis } Maj. Brower.
1819 b. f. Miss O'Neil by Camillus } dam of Belvidere, by Blacklock }
1821 b. f. ——— by Octavian, Mr. Allen.
1822 gr. c. Androgens, by Minos, Mr. Houldsworth.
1823 b. c. ——— by Aneolis, }
1824 b. c. ——— by Filho da Puta, } Mr. Mytton.
1825 br. c. Hedgford, do. }
1826 Slipped 2 colts, by do. Mr. Lacey.
1827 br. c. Birmingham by do. Mr. Beardsworth.

Thus it will be seen that Hedgford is own brother to Birmingham the winner of the great St. Leger stakes at Doncaster in 1830, beating Priam and 26 others, considered the best horse in England of his years. Birmingham and Priam, at that day, being the two best horses in the Kingdom.

Filho da Puta, sire of Hedgford, was got by Haphazard, his dam Mrs. Barnet, by Waxy—Woodpecker—Herod by Squirrel—Principessa by Blank.

Haphazard, sire of Filho da Puta, and paternal Grandsire of Hedgford, was got by Sir Peter Teazle. His dam Miss Hervey, by Eclipse. Her dam Clio, by young Cade—Starling—Bartlet's Childers—Bay Bolton—Byerly Turk—Taistler.

Orville, sire of Miss Craigie, and maternal grandsire of Hedgford, was got by Beningbrough. His dam Evelina, by Highflyer, out of Termagant, by Tantrum—Sampson—Regulus—Marske's dam.

Many of our readers, who attended the Fall Races, over the Union Course, near this city, will recollect Hedgford, whose exhibition called forth many encomiums from the throng assembled, on his fine appearance. He was imported by Mr. William Jackson, who purchased him in England of the Earl of Derby. His departure was noticed in the English Sporting Journals as a national loss. The friends of the Turf here are under many obligations to Mr. Jackson, for introducing a Racer, so celebrated for his size, beauty, and blood, as to render him a truly valuable acquisition to the American sporting world.

Hedgford is a rich brown, five feet five inches high, with a beautiful star in his forehead, elegant head and neck, unequalled shoulders, fine back and loin, good thigh, and fine bone and sinew. He is said by those who have seen them, to be an exact likeness of his brother Birmingham, the most successful and profitable racer of his age, in England; and they both bear a strong resemblance to their sire Filho da Puta, who has produced more winners than any other horse of that kingdom. Hedgford is descended not only from the most popular line, but from the most successful coursers in England. His grandsire Orville, won the great St. Leger in 1802. His sire, Filho da Puta, won the great St. Leger in 1815; and his full brother Birmingham is at this time at the head of the turf in England—having won more money than any other horse of his day, even exclusive of the great St. Leger, which he won in 1830.

Hedgford has gone to the "Old Dominion," under the patronage of John C. Goode, Esq. and will stand at his house the ensuing season five miles south of Boydton, within a mile of Taylor's Ferry, on the Roanoke, Mecklenburg, Va. where, we trust, the lovers of fine horses will avail themselves of the present opportunity to improve the breed of these noble animals.

EXHIBITION OF MR. MEEKS.

On Monday evening, Mr. Meeks, of Albany, will give an exhibition at Tammany Hall of the Science of Position, in which several distinguished amateurs are expected to take part. His testimonials as to character, combined with his known excellence in this department of the "manly sciences" will go far to ensure him a warm reception from the "Fancy" of this city. Tickets may be had at the principal hotels and at Tammany Hall.

TO CURE DRAM DRINKING.

Dr. Lettsom mentions a person who usually drank 12 drams a day, but being convinced of his approaching misery took the resolution to wean himself from this poison. He always drank out of one glass, into which he daily let fall a drop of sealing wax. By this means he had 12 drops less of spirit every day, till at length his glass being filled with wax, his habit was cured.—Mirror.

The Drama.

MR. C. KEAN.

On Monday evening, played for his Benefit to one of the most respectable and crowded audiences assembled at the Park this season. His first appearance was in Hamlet, and though his personation of the "philosophic Dane" is considered his forte, we are assured by several present that he never played with more judgment, taste and feeling. We would not presume to institute a comparison between "a mere professional child" and "the veterans on the stage;" there was, however, to us a charm in his chaste and refined style of acting that seldom accompanies its representation; his reading is exquisite, his "points" well conceived and tastefully executed. Unlike "some bright, particular Star," he impresses his audience with the idea of the character before them, while the actor is lost and forgotten,—and whether he would develope or conceal what is passing within him, he is equally successful in "exciting the most unbounded sympathy."

Shylock succeeded to Hamlet, but owing, perhaps to the immense applause bestowed upon the latter, we thought the "unfeeling Jew" was over acted; indeed it is not of unfrequent occurrence, on occasions like the present, and in this instance could well be overlooked. We have seen Booth, whose faculties, perhaps unlike Kean's are fully developed, play it better occasionally, but he alone can do the character more justice than the subject of this crude notice. A contemporary's remark is so true in our opinion on this identical quere, that we adopt it. He says, Mr. K. and Mr. Booth, with one exception, Mr. Charles Kemble, stand alone as candidates for fame in the higher walks of tragedy; and considering as we do, Mr. Booth as only inferior to the elder Kean in certain parts, it is high praise to Mr. C. Kean, to say that he has been Mr. Booth's only rival in this country.

The Sir Giles Overreach of Mr. Kean, is said by many to resemble his father's: it certainly was sustained this evening with signal ability and success. And when it is remembered that he "played the most arduous parts of three characters, which have called forth so much talent in others, all on one evening, taking only time to perform the necessary changes at his toilet, we consider it an unanswerable proof of his extraordinary powers, that such an audience should have evinced a satisfaction so entirely complete."

We cannot but admire the great good taste displayed by Mr. Kean in his costume; each was appropriate, and forcibly impressed on the audience a characteristic feature of the person before them, and of the age in which he trod the world's great stage.

At the conclusion of the last act of Sir Giles, a beautiful coronal wreath was thrown on the stage, a circumstance that elicited the most immense applause, and could not be otherwise construed than as a "universal tribute to his genius, in the admission that he had fairly won it." The Editor of the Advocate says that in a long course of theatrical attendance, he has never seen more enthusiasm displayed, and remarked with the highest satisfaction the unpretending manner in which it was received throughout the evening.

At the close of the performance the reiterated plaudits, with calls of "Kean," "Kean," brought forward Mr. Barry, who begged the indulgence of the audience for Mr. K. who required a few moments to recover from the exhaustion attendant on the arduous efforts of the evening. Mr. Kean soon came on, and delivered the following happy and pertinent address, which is much enhanced to those who know him in private life, inasmuch as they are thoroughly convinced it came warm from a heart susceptible of every refined and gentlemanly feeling.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I must crave your indulgence for the tardiness with which I have obeyed your summons, but the exhaustion I have experienced this evening, I trust, will plead a sufficient apology. I am proud of the opportunity thus afforded me of being able to express to an American public my sincere and heartfelt gratitude for the kindness and hospitality extended towards me during my stay in this country. I arrived in this city a mere professional child; scarcely known, save as the son of a former favorite, and whatever fame I may have partially attained, to you, and you alone am I indebted. I am now about to seek my fortune in a fresh arena, but sincerely believe me, whatever destiny awaits my return to the land that gave me birth, it never can, nor shall obliterate the memory of those days passed amongst you. It may be that I now stand before you for the last time, but if my life be spared, not many years shall elapse before I again present myself on these boards—'till which period permit me, ladies and gentlemen, respectfully to pronounce to you that sad word—farewell!

On Wednesday, an old favorite, Miss Clara Fisher, commenced an engagement at this house, and will run through her various line of characters. She is to sustain the principal part in a new drama, which "is being got up," called "The Four Sisters." Several novelties we understand are in progress, and will be produced during her engagement.

A miniature edition of Master Burke bearing the romantic cognomen of Bowers, made his debut on Thursday evening in Young Norval.—His voice is remarkable in one so young, (nine years) and his gestures and readings evinced considerable talent, but his friends we think have erred in bringing him thus early before the public. No one can see him with Barry or Ritchings, without being too forcibly reminded of Gulliver's Lilliputians and Brobdignagians, and frequently the audience were almost unconsciously convulsed with laughter. He most certainly is a boy of great promise, and we only regret he has not the stature of a man.

MISS ANN WARING

Takes a Benefit at the American Theatre, Bowery, this evening—aside from her claims as a clever and deserving actress, the bill of fare is peculiarly attractive.

The Richmond Hill Theatre during the week has presented attractions which have been appreciated by the play going public.

THEATRICAL CHIT CHAT.

The Kembles are playing in Washington to very respectable houses. Their receipts thus far is said will exceed $20,000. Mr. G. H. Hill, the rival of Hackett, is playing "Solomon Swap," and other Yankee characters at the Warren Theatre, Boston. Mr. Pelby it is said is "coining money" at his "snug little concern." At the Tremont Mrs. Austin and Mr. Horn appear in "Cinderella" and "Massaniello." The latter piece continues to attract full and fashionable houses. Mr. E. Forest has finished a very successful engagement at Albany. Bird's tragedy of Oralloossa was repeated three times to overflowing houses. The New Orleans Courier of the 14th December, after noticing the report published in the Eastern papers of the death of Mrs. Duff, the actress, adds—Mrs. Duff, we are happy to say, is not only alive and well, but is at this moment "winning golden opinions" from admiring thousands. Braham, the English singer, has amassed a fortune of a hundred thousand pounds sterling, though he has lived liberally. Madame Catalani is said to have cleared more than ninety thousand pounds sterling in England. A new farce by Mr. Pocock, entitled the Rail Road of Love, has recently been brought out at the Covent Garden Theatre. It is said to be full of bustle, intrigue, incident and drollery from beginning to end. No sooner was it announced that Madame Malibran was engaged at Drury-lane, than no less than six operas were sent en masse, to the manager, in order that he might select one in which she could make her first appearance. On the same day, or the day after, Covent Garden experienced an inundation of plays founded upon some of Scott's yet undramatised novels or poems.

The Boston papers are chatting about the Kembles at a great rate. The Daily Advocate says, that "Mr. Kemble has had a sort of a blow up with one of the Philadelphia Managers, or the Manager with him, he can't say which. He seems to be quite a magisterial personage, and can't suit himself to Yankee notions."

The Transcript of the 14th says there is a report that the Kembles have been engaged to play at the Warren street Theatre, but the editor thinks the report cannot be true, nor emanate from any friendly feelings towards Mr. Pelby, the liberal Manager of that establishment, whose pecuniary circumstances, it must be obvious, will not be benefitted by any such extravagant engagement.

THE THREE FANNIES.

Miss Fanny Kelly, a woman of original genius, fine taste, strong intellect, and exquisite sensibility—equal to any part of passion. Miss Fanny Kemble acts nobly, like a poetess, as she is; and equal to either of them in all things, and in some superior to both, is our own Miss Fanny Jarman, equal to either in power and pathos and superior to both in grace, elegance, and beauty. The three are all as much respected for their virtue in private life as they are admired for their genius on the stage; and that lends a charm to their impersonations of such characters as Imogen, Desdemona, Ophelia, and Cordelia, which is felt by every audience, and for the want of which no accomplishment can compensate.—Blackwood's Magazine.

NEGRO PHILOSOPHY.

John Canepole was a small pocket edition of humanity. He had a black servant who was a stout fellow; and being a privileged joker, Sambo let no occasion pass unimproved, where he could rally his master upon his diminutive carcase.—John was taken sick and Sambo sent for the doctor. The faithful negro loved his master, and upon the arrival of the physician looked up in his face anxiously. Examining the symptoms, the Doctor pronounced his patient in no danger.—Reassured by this, Sambo's spirits returned, and he indulged his natural disposition for drollery. "I tell you Doctor, Massa Canepole will die, cause he got a fever?" "A fever, you black dog," said the patient, "does a fever always kill a fellow?" "Yes, massa, when a fever get into such a dam little man it neber hab room to turn in him, and if de fever no turn, you die, sartin?"—Lowell Compend.

FORCE OF ANGER.

On Monday afternoon the wife of of a laboring man named Dickens, in Exeter-street Lisson Grove, during a dispute with her husband, worked her feelings to such a pitch of excitement that on her husband leaving the room, which is on the second floor, she threw herself head foremost out of the window, and fell into a paved yard at the back of the house. She was taken up in a most miserable condition, having both her legs broken, and being otherwise so desperately injured, that she is not expected to live.

THE PROPOSAL.

Miss M. a young heiress of considerable personal attractions, chanced to be seated at a dinner party next to a gentleman remarkable in the fashionable circles for the brilliancy of his wit, and who had long made one in the train of her admirers. The conversation turning on the uncertainty of life, 'I mean to insure mine,' said the young lady, archly, 'in the Hope.' 'In the hope of what,' said her admirer, 'a single life is hardly worth insuring; I propose that we should insure our lives together, and if you have no objection, I should prefer the Alliance.'—Lon. Paper.

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANNISEED,
FOR COUGHS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, ASTHMAS, &c.

UNDER the immediate patronage of several of the most distinguished Nobility and Gentry in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, Scotland and Ireland, in bottles at 30 and 60 cents each.

This invaluable Medicine has the extraordinary property of immediately relieving coughs, colds, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, and huskiness in the throat. It operates by dissolving the congealed Phlegm, consequently causing a free expectoration. Those who are troubled with tickling in the throat which deprives them of rest night after night, by the incessant cough which it provokes, will, by taking one dose, find immediate relief, and one bottle in most cases will effect a cure. Numerous cases have come to the Proprietor's knowledge, where young people have been troubled with Coughs, spitting of Blood, and gradual wasting away, with every appearance of going into a decline, who, by taking two or three bottles, have been entirely cured. In Asthmas, chronic coughs, difficulty in breathing, &c., no pen can describe the wonders that have been performed by this invaluable medicine. Many, who for years have been unable to lie down in their beds without a danger of being choked by an accumulation of phlegm (which invariably causes a dreadful cough to others, who with difficulty could breathe at all in a recumbent posture, have, by taking one dose of this excellent BALSAM, been enabled to lie down comfortably in their beds. But the testimonials of those who have experienced its wonderful effects will do more to recommend and insure it the support of the public, than any thing the proprietor can say in its favor, and by particular request he has published the following:—

Extract of a letter forwarded by James Fair, Esq. of Lustruther, Roxburgshire, to Mr. Renwick, of Jedburg, who forwarded it to Mr. Powell.

"Dear Sir, Lustruther, 18th of January, 1830.

"You know that I was sceptical with regard to the wonders performed by the administration of Patent Medicines to the numerous complaints of 'afflicted patients.' I have now altered my opinion, at least in so far as to the effect produced on me by two doses of 'Powell's Balsam of Aniseed.' In fact it was quite magical! Having been for some time afflicted and tormented with what is termed a 'stomach cough,' I took one tea-spoonful of the bottle sent me, mixed with a wine glassful of cold water, in the morning, and the same in the evening, on stepping into bed; and although prevented from sleeping the whole of the previous night, I found myself entirely cured, not having even coughed from that time to this, a period of at least a week! had one of the 'Seraphic Choir' descended from Heaven and said, 'be ye whole,' the effect produced could not have been more immediate or effectual.

NEW-HAVEN & HARTFORD
STEAMBOAT LINE.

Daily, Sundays excepted. Passage from New-York to Hartford, including stage fare, $3. To New-Haven, $2.

The steamboat SUPERIOR Capt. Sanford, and the new steamboat SPLENDID, Capt. Bucher, will on Tuesday the 28th inst. commence a daily line and run as follows:—From the steamboat place, foot of Beekman-street. The Superior will leave every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday morning at 7 o'clock. The Splendid, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning at the same hour. Returning will leave New-Haven on the alternate day at 12 o'clock, noon.

The Superior is well known to the travelling public, and needs no commendation; no pains nor expense have been spared in the construction of the Splendid to render her in every respect a first rate boat. It is expected she will equal the Superior in speed and in other respects it is hoped she will be thought worthy of her name. The Captain and Agent will not be wanting in their exertions to promote the comfort and safety of passengers.

Excellent Post Coaches and horses are always ready on arrival of the Boat at New-Haven, to convey passengers to Hartford, Providence, and Boston. a30

Amusements.

PEALE'S MUSEUM
AND GALLERY OF THE FINE ARTS,
BROADWAY, OPPOSITE THE CITY HALL.

THE public are informed that this unrivalled institution is open during the day and illuminated every evening. This valuable collection of the works of nature and art is arranged in three spacious apartments—the paintings are executed by eminent artists, and the subjects of natural history are prepared in the very best manner to resemble life.

The Great Cosmorama, Egyptian Mummy, and Living Anaconda, or Great Serpent of India, are amongst the objects of great attraction.

The evenings are enlivened by fine music, and the 4th or Lecture Room, affords much amusement by the exhibition of the Fantasmagoria or Magic Lanthern and other exhibitions in the course of each evening.

Admittance at all times 25 cents, children half price. dec 23

AMERICAN MUSEUM,
Marble Building, Broadway, opposite St Paul's Church.

THIS splendid and extensive establishment still continues open for the gratification of the citizen and stranger; it contains the largest collection of curiosities in the United States and is daily increasing by the same unwearied exertions that for upwards of twenty years have been brought to its present immense extent, embracing in Natural History and the arts all that could be procured worthy of exhibition. It now consists of four large saloons, each upwards of one hundred feet in length, the first contains a rare and valuable collection of Birds; the second the largest collection of Animals and Fish in America; the third contains a case with the Sea Lion and other monsters of the great deep, besides an immense collection of shells, minerals, fossils, war implements, &c. of the Feegee, Sandwich and other nations, waxwork and the Egyptian Mummy, 3000 years old; the fourth containing the grand Cosmora, which is now set with 59 views of different parts of the world, and still continues to elicit universal admiration.

Mr. NOOSER, who last year gave entire satisfaction by his musical talents is again engaged. His performance on the clarionet is very fine and is accompanied by his two little boys, whose performance on the violin is truly astonishing.

Admittance 25 cents; children half price.

HISTORY OF THE U. STATES,
IN FRENCH.

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS—with questions for the examination of Pupils on the sense of the text in the English language—by C. O. Barbaroux. The History of the United States is selected from a series of French publications of a similar character, and prepared for the use of Schools in this country. The editor has added a set of questions for reviewing the lessons after translating it to the class; as these refer to the sense and cannot be answered without a correct understanding of the French Text, it is believed that they will render the work a most desirable class book in all our Schools where the French language is studied. JUST published, by LINCOLN & EDMANDS Boston, Blake's First Book in Astronomy. The following is an extract of a letter from H. Barritt, Esq. the author of the Treatise on the Encke Comet, which excites so much interest the present year. Mr. Barritt may be considered one of the most scientific astronomers in this country. "I believe I am entitled to the praise of being first to introduce your 'First Book in Astronomy' into the schools in this country. I have been anxiously watching the press for years, to find something on this subject adapted to primary instruction as a school book, that should combine enough of the attractions of the science to give it interest, and at the same time, so much of its exact and physical elements as to give it a suitable degree of scientific accuracy. I have a dozen different works purporting to bear something of this character, but am not entirely satisfied with any of them. About a month since, I found your 'First Lessons' in Hartford, brought home a copy and examined it, and immediately sent back and purchased all that were at that place. To tell the truth, I had commenced and progressed some chapters in a similar work myself; but my own experience, as a humble teacher and admirer of the science, enables me to say, that something, other and better than that we had, was greatly wanted. I rejoice, therefore, in the appearance of your little book, and am of opinion, that with such trifling improvements as a revision may suggest, it will leave too little time unoccupied to tempt forward a competitor in the same field." STOUGHTON COLLECTION.—CHURCH MUSIC.

JUST published by MARSH, CAPEN & LYON, Washington-st. Boston, and Concord, N. H. opposite the Capitol, the 4th edition, enlarged and improved. This work was arranged by the Stoughton Musical Society. It has been improved and stereotyped, and the publishers have spared no pains or expense in rendering it worthy of extensive patronage. It is printed on royal size paper of good quality, and strongly bound. The type is of Lothian's construction, New-York, and for beauty and distinctness, is superior to any thing of the kind ever produced in this country. A writer in a Boston Journal, gives the following reasons for his partiality to the work. Without further recapitulation, we shall give our reasons why we adopted a signature as being friendly to the Stoughton Collection of Church Music.

1st. Because it affords that variety of music calculated to please, and beneficially to effect the people of this country. 2d. because it has reinstated many of the old American tunes, of great merit, in their proper rank—which before were the same as lost to the world—they being out of print. 3d. because it is compiled with strict reference to the wants of the whole community, and not particular for one class, to the exclusion of others. 4th. because the alterations in the old tunes do not interfere with our pleasurable associations, and the established habits and tastes of a large portion of our singers. 5th. because its arrangement is to remain unchanged—until another and a different taste prevails among the people. 6th. because by the performances of its pieces, the objects and ends are fully answered. Drugs and Medicines.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

THOSE who may have been so unfortunate as to have been under the necessity of taking large quantities of MERCURY, and now feel its poisonous effects, producing excruciating pains in the bones, giving tokens of decay, scrofulous eruptions on the head, the face, legs, and other parts of the body; as well as those troubled with the many diseases arising from impurity of the blood, leading to gout, rheumatism, pains in the breast, indigestion, coughs, consumption, and many other horrid forms of a complicated disease, are informed that almost certain hopes of permanent cure may be entertained by taking that truly valuable medicine, DR. THORP'S CARMENENTIA.

The exclamation of the learned Doctor Solomon is still more applicable to this wonderful medicine, than that to which he applied it:

"Is there no balm in Gilead,—is there not a physician there? why not then is the health of the daughter of my people recovered?"

Doctor THORP may be consulted at any hour of the day from 10 o'clock A. M. to 10 o'clock P. M. at his office, 399 Broadway; or by letter, enclosing the usual fee of five dollars. dec 22 1m

DR. DE GOURGUE'S PATENT SPECIFIC.

This medicine has been used with great success as thousands can testify. In all rheumatic affections whether acute or chronic, its decided superiority by affording almost immediate relief has been successfully tested. For the following complaints it will be found very efficacious, viz: Quinced sore throat, Hives in children, Pain in the back and Sciatica, Bruises and Sprains, Chapped hands, violent contusions, Fresh wounds, Burns and Scalds, Head and Tooth ache, Debility of the system. Prevents the eye from turning black if immediately applied; is excellent for washing the teeth and gums, &c. &c. The specific has been administered with surprising success, in cases of flatulency, pain in the stomach, bowels, dysentery, &c.

The most inveterate Piles has been thoroughly cured by it. A Fistula, which in most cases proves fatal, yielded to the specific. The above medicine is held in such high estimation by many families that they are unwilling to be without it a moment.

Prepared and sold until further notice, ONLY at the south east corner of the Bowery and 8th street, 2d corner above Vauxhall Garden.

The extensive demand manifested for the genuine De Gourgue's Specific, has induced several to endeavor to deceive the public by persuading them to purchase a counterfeit medicine. No person except the proprietor in the city of New York is authorised to vend De Gourgue's Specific, and it can be obtained at no other place than the above, where it is prepared, and which may be known by the sign over the door. Each bottle is accompanied with printed directions, sealed with the initials D. G. on the cork, NONE OTHER IS GENUINE. Retail price 50 cents per bottle; wholesale $4 50 per dozen.

Directions—Shake the bottle and apply the Specific with friction to the afflicted parts. In fevers rub well the small of the back. For Hives in children apply it freely to the chest. For Convulsions by rubbing the back and stomach, its effects are almost instantaneous. For the Headache apply it to the back of the neck and soles of the feet. For chilblains or frosted feet, rub them twice a day, or oftener. From 20 drops to a tea-spoon full may be taken inwardly, mixed with water.

A selection of certificates from numerous respectable individuals is annexed, to give the public some idea of the value of the above medicine.

This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," and the most beneficial result has been the consequence. For the last twenty years I have been afflicted with the rheumatism, and suffered to that degree, that I never went without a cane or a strengthening plaster. By bathing with the Specific the pain is removed. I can walk without a cane and have no occasion for a strengthening plaster; the great relief I have obtained, I attribute under providence to the Specific. It gives me great satisfaction, therefore, to recommend it to my fellow citizens.

[Signed] THOMAS CROMWELL, 359 Bowery.
New York, 2d February, 1832.

This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," to my entire satisfaction, and I do not hesitate to give my unqualified approbation in favor of the same. By the use of less than one oz., in three weeks time, my hand, which was badly torn to pieces with the loss of one finger, by the accidental discharge of a gun, was completely healed. I have also known others to use it with like success.

[Signed] EDWARD CONLEY, Blackwell's Island.
New York, July 3, 1830.

I have been in the habit of using "De Gourgue's Specific" for several years, and do not hesitate to give it the highest recommendation, having used it most plentifully and always found the greatest benefit from it.

[Signed] JOSEPH GANOUNG, 52 Carmine street.
New York, 12th Dec. 1831.

I certify, that having made use of "De Gourgue's Patent Specific" for myself and family, occasionally for more than two years,—I do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends for the cure of every complaint, and more than are named in the directions accompanying each phial.

WM. D. DISBROW.
New York, Aug. 2, 1830. Bowery, near Fifth st.

I have great satisfaction in recommending "De Gourgue's Patent Specific," considering it a very valuable medicine, having been in the habit of using it for the last three years. In a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which deprived me of the use of my limbs, so much so that I could not put my foot to the floor or raise my arms,—I was induced to try the Specific, and was so much relieved that the next day I was enabled to walk freely, and speedily recovered, from the use of one bottle. I have also used it with the greatest efficacy for burns, bruises, wounds, &c. in my family.

ELIZA BROOKS.
Jan. 23, 1832. Corner 1st Avenue and 10th st.

I was badly afflicted with a violent and continual pain in my breast, for about nine years; the last two or three years it was extremely bad. I had consulted five or six different physicians, and tried various remedies. Every thing, however, failed to give me relief, until I fortunately used "De Gourgue's Specific," which, I am happy to state, perfectly cured me in a short time. I keep the medicine constantly in my family, and use it for various purposes, and recommend it highly to all families.

CHEMICAL EMBROCATION,

OR, WHITWELL'S ORIGINAL OPODELDOC. One bottle of which is warranted to contain three times the strength of the hard kind.

This article is considered by the first physicians in the United States, to rank higher than any other composition in existence, for the following complaints, viz: —Bruises, Sprains, Gout, Rheumatism, Cramp, Numbness, Weakness or Stiffness of the Neck or Joints, Chilblains, Chapped Hands, Stings of Insects, Vegetable poisons, &c. &c. It is applied both to man and beast.

N. B. There are in the United States no less than fifty imitations of this article, a pretty good evidence of the worth of the original: but the public ought to be acquainted with the fact, that nine-tenths of these pretended imitations of this inimitable composition, sold under the name of "Liquid Opodeldoc" are, little else than hard soap, and a small quantity of camphor, dissolved in whiskey or new rum.

To encourage ignorant and bold pretenders, is to countenance imposture; to purchasers of this class time and experience will teach wisdom. Prudence, in all cases, is a desirable virtue; but the saving of a few cents in a phial of medicine is pitiful economy, and may lead to worse consequences than the loss of the money.

The idea of preferring a physician because he was a cheap one, would be considered a mark of insanity. To prefer one medicine to another because it costs less is equally adverse to sound policy and common sense; in both cases Life and Limb are at stake. No person could use the same ingredients and afford the article at a less price. A knowledge of this composition however, is known only to the Proprietor and to the physician whose certificate accompanies it.

At this warehouse may also be had of the original and sole proprietor, the

VOLATILE AROMATIC SNUFF,

For many years celebrated in cases of catarrh, headach, dizziness, dimness of eyesight, drowsiness, lowness of spirits, hypocondria, nervous weakness, &c. —It is most fragrant and grateful to the smell, being mostly composed of roots and aromatic herbs. It is absolutely necessary for all those who watch with or visit the sick.

Price 50 cents and 25 cents.

DETERGENT BITTERS.

A most efficacious and wonderful cordial medicine for dyspepsia, jaundice, sickness of the stomach, flatulence, want of appetite, &c. They give a tone to the solids, enrich the blood, and invigorate the whole system. No tavern should be without them. Price 12 1-2 cents a paper. The PURGATIVE POWDERS are eighly important in all the above complaints, and should in most cases be used with the Bitters.

BUTLER'S INDIAN SPECIFIC.

THIS is to certify that for three years past, I have been laboring under a complaint of the breast and lungs and at last was taken down with spitting of blood, cough, fever and a general ulcerated state of the body, with all the symptoms leading to a consumption.

I had the advice of physicians and tried various remedies without relief and at last was advised to try Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, which has so far restored me, as to be able to attend to my ordinary business. And as a most valuable medicine I do most cheerfully recommend it to the public.

Popular Houses.

NIBLO'S HOTEL,

No. 112 BROADWAY, BETWEEN PINE AND CEDAR streets, New York.

THE subscriber returns his grateful acknowledgments to his friends and the public for the liberal support afforded him since his establishment in this city. Having found, however, that the name of his Hotel, which he originally adopted, (Congress Hall,) subjects him to many inconveniences in consequence of the proprietor of a public establishment in his immediate vicinity having assumed the same title, and being unwilling by a continuance of the present name of his house, to embarrass his neighbor as well as himself, he has resolved on changing the same to that of NIBLO'S HOTEL, hoping under this new title to merit a continuance of public patronage. No situation in this city can present more advantages to permanent and transient guests than Niblo's Hotel; its central location, being near the principal places of amusement and its vicinity to the public offices and business part of the town, renders it a most desirable resort for families and gentlemen engaged in commercial and other pursuits.

The experience which the subscriber has acquired as proprietor, for many years, of that extensive establishment at the EXCHANGE HOTEL in Petersburg, Virginia, and subsequently as an associate with Mr. Heiskell of the City Hotel, Philadelphia, will, he trusts, prove a sufficient guarantee to all who may honor him with their patronage, that nothing shall be wanting on his part, or by those in his employ, to contribute in every respect to their accommodation and comfort. dec 22

CLINTON LUNCH,

Corner of Liberty street and Broadway.

THE proprietors of the establishment, which has been opened since May last, in consequence of the unparalleled support they have received, are induced to come before the public with their best thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on them, and to assure them that instead of relaxing in their exertions to please, which is too much the case with many who undertake to conduct similar establishments, they are stimulated to increased exertions, if possible, and determined to preserve in the same straight forward path in which they have commenced, hoping thereby to deserve a continuance of that support they have hitherto so liberally been favored with. The undersigned being averse to all kinds of common-place puffing, have been determined that this establishment should rise or fall by its own merits or demerits; and as they have now been six months fairly before the public, and that public having continued daily to increase its patronage, they are justified in presuming that the course they have pursued in conducting this establishment has been generally approved, and as a proof of their determination to spare no pains or expense in improving and enlarging the same from time to time, as circumstances may require, for the public accommodation, they have now to announce that they have, at a very considerable expense, fitted up and handsomely furnished an extra Dining Room on the first floor, which was opened to the public on the 8th instant, the entrance to which is from No. 73 Liberty street. The proprietors will now be enabled to get up Dinners and Suppers for private parties, of all the delicacies of the season, in a style equal to any establishment in the city, at the shortest notice. Their Wines and Liquors will as usual continue to be chosen from the oldest and most choice stocks in the city, and the personal exertions of the proprietors will be continued, and their best efforts exercised to please and to deserve public patronage. The Ordinary, as usual, will be conducted on the most liberal principles. Hot Coffee and Tea at all hours from 7 in the morning till 12 at night. Oysters of the best quality, in all their varieties, and Soups of every description at all times.

L. CRUTTENDEN, of Albany,

HAS left his situation on the "Hill," and has taken the EAGLE TAVERN for a term of years, where he would be pleased to see his old acquaintances as well as his new friends.

N. B. The reasons for the above transaction, (and "they are as plenty as blackberries,") shall be the subject of a forthcoming communication; although many of them he shall reserve for the private ear of his friends. He intends, likewise, to give hereafter, a very pompous and swelling account of all the excellent articles that he shall have in the house and on the table; the very superior treatment his guests shall receive, &c. He will even enumerate the number of dishes that will be on the table, as well as a number of other ridiculous things that cannot be mentioned at this time.

RAILWAY HOTEL,

CARBONDALE.—Penn.

THIS establishment, having been enlarged and fitted up in a superior manner, is now open for the accommodation of men of business, travellers, and parties of pleasure. The table is furnished with the best of provisions, the bar with the choicest wines, and the reading room with the principal New York, Philadelphia, and other newspapers.—The situation of this village of Carbondale, in the very heart of the mountains, renders it one of the healthiest resorts for invalids and families—the scenery in the vicinity, wild and picturesque, offers the greatest inducement to the admirers of nature, while the extensive coal works of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company (of which this is the seat), the Mines, the Railways, the inclined Planes, by which the coal is conveyed over the mountains, present attractions to every one, as well from the novelty as the magnitude of the undertakings. Every attention will be given to the comfort and accommodation of boarders, and travellers may depend upon the most prompt attendance with their wishes. E. M. TOWNS[illegible]

DR. HOGAN, continues to be consulted in the most confidential manner as usual, at his offices, 17 Duane st. between Chatham and William sts. New York, where those afflicted with delicate diseases Scrofula, Fits, of obstinate Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Fever and Ague, Worms, Diseases of the Bladder, Urethra and Kidneys, and all diseases arising from the abuse of mercury, or impurity of the blood, are invited to call. The terrible consequences too often resulting from the use of mercury, need no description—those afflicted with a certain disease may apply to Dr. Hogan with the fullest confidence of having it removed without a particle of mercury, or any other dangerous medicine; his charges are reasonable, and in every case he undertakes, he guarantees a perfect cure without confinement or hindrance from business. It may be necessary to mention for the information of strangers that Dr Hogan has been professionally educated by some of the most talented medical and surgical teachers, and that he has had considerable practice in extensive Hospitals and public Dispensaries. Separate offices with separate entrances open daily, until 10 P. M. A complete plan of medicine for a certain disease, with directions for those leaving the city, and sent to order on receipt of a reasonable fee to those whose sensitive delicacy is disinclined to an interview. A preventive medicine for a certain disease if used in due time. No letters received unless post paid. The most honorable secrecy observed. july 5

PAUL A. SABBATON, Proprietor of the Phœnix Foundry, corner of Rivington and Cannon streets, East River, continues making Steam Engines of all sizes, and invites persons wanting Engines to examine those of his make, of which there are from thirty to forty in operation, from four to forty horse power, in different parts of the United States including thirteen in this city.

Having an extensive assortment of wheel and other patterns, he is from experience enabled to estimate for machinery, and make contracts for the erection of factories and Mill work of any description.

Rents those ordered, has on hand in a state of forwardness, a 4, 6, 12, and 20 horse-power Engines, that can be finished at two or three week's notice. Iron Castings and Wrought Iron work made to order.

For sale—two setts of brass Hollowware Patterns;—consisting of 40 sizes of Pots, and 40 Iron Flasks and Brass Cheeks and Sides; the patterns have been formed after the true Scotch shape, and the flasks of the most approved construction.

A new Iron Cotton Press. A 40 horse power Engine but little damaged by being used.

PATENT PORTABLE FILTER. Joseph Parker, Sole Patentee, 44 1-2 Wall-street, near Broadway, New-York. The Patentee respectfully solicits the attention of the Inhabitants of this populous city, to an article of such general utility, and in so doing it is confident, that the merit of his invention when thus publicly known, will meet with the approbation of a discerning public. The PATENT FILTER possesses the advantage of rendering, and testing crystal, the most stagnant water, and forms an indispensable addition to all well regulated Establishments. Spring or Pump Water has hitherto been used and preferred, principally on account of its brilliancy; but numerous medical authorities pronounce it injurious to health inasmuch as it generally holds in solution, various earthly and metalic substances. But all authors, ancient and modern, have concurred in pronouncing rain or river water, provided it be pure, as the best adapted to the human constitution. That the rain water which is collected in wells or cisterns, and the river water with which the city is partially supplied, are both destitute of this indispensable essential, the Patentee has not only his own, but received and the most knowledge for stating. He is also aware of a fact which the public in all probability are not, viz. That one or other water collected into wells, or cisterns, contains not only particles of Animalculæ, but [illegible] The PATENT FILTER completely and effectually frees the most turbid and stagnant water not only from the above, but all others earthy matter, and impurities. The PATENT FILTER may be had at Mr. W. VANES 184 Fulton street, near Broadway, and of the Patentee, 44 1-2 Wall street, at each place orders [illegible], will meet with due attention. The Prices are from $5 to $20 each—and for each [illegible].

PICKEREL FISHING.

In New England, and the Western and Middle States, Fishing for Pickerel has ever been one of the most favorite amusements. In New England we think the science or art is less known or understood than in this or the middle States, yet "Jack Crane" of New Hampshire, was never beaten. He could, from the "silver brook, draw forth the speckled trout," though probably he never heard of, much less read the "complete Angler" of good old Izaak Walton.

In Cincinnati, in Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York and Boston, we have Piscatorial Clubs, and frequently with pleasure, read of "achievements" by some favored disciple of the Rod, but in the country such companies are unknown. At times, a few, perhaps only two or three gentlemen fond of Angling, "join their fortunes for a day," and make a Piscatorial excursion to some lake or pond, celebrated for a good stock of the "finny tribe," but then, after a supper at "dewy eve," there is an end to the copartnership. We wish our friends would think of this matter, and, as every town affords gentlemen sufficiently numerous, form a complete Club. A few officers only are requisite,—the expence is too small to be any objection, and the pleasure is doubled. Make up a party to go out on a specified day, (if the Club is numerous or too large, divide it,) choose sides, and let the one taking the least fish, provide a supper for the other, and our word for it, you will better enjoy your sport and yourselves. Added to this, you cannot help acquiring some useful hints from observing the science or method of each other. If your Secretary is afflicted with the cacoethes scribendi, any fine fishing should be reported; or if any observations that would be useful to sportsmen generally are made, our paper would be the very medium to communicate them, and one might have the "satisfaction," as Pat said, "to see his name in print," if unluckily he should be drowned or any other little accident should befal him.

We were led to these crude remarks by reading in the Sportsman's Cyclopedia, various methods of taking Pickerel, some of which we give to-day. Should any Waltonian friend make an experiment of some of those laid down, or his own, and give us his opinion, he shall be entitled to the thanks of ourselves and all good Anglers "from this time forth, forevermore."

In some places Pike are taken by what is termed dipping; the hook used is a large sized gorge hook, very slightly leaded on the shank, and baited as in trolling, only the mouth of the fish is to be sewed up, and the back fin cut away, and then looped to the swivel; the line is let out from the reel to a convenient length, and the bait is dropped in any small openings where the water is not very deep, and overspread with docks and weeds. The fish hanging with his head downwards, will, when gently moved, (and all baits, especially dead ones, should be kept in constant motion,) shoot and play about among the weeds so naturally, that the Pike will be eager in taking it this way, even from the surface: when the bait is seized, the line is to be slackened, and the Pike allowed line to run; in a short time it will be perceived to shake, which is a signal to strike; when hooked, he must be cautiously managed, winding up the line gradually: in getting the Pike through the weeds, endeavor to keep his nose above them, and use the landing-net in taking him from the water. In this method the baits must be as fresh as possible.

For snap-fishing, (which is best used in March, the Pike being then very shy of gorging, although with seeming eagerness they seize the bait,) should the rod be purposely made for it, the length should be about twelve feet; if a common rod is employed, the top should be stouter than that used in trolling, with a strong loop to fasten the line upon, which must be a foot shorter than the rod: for the live snap, no hook is so proper as the double spring hook: to bait it, nothing more is requisite than to hang the fish to the small hook under the back fin, which may be done with so little hurt to the fish that it will live for many hours. Gudgeons, (which, in all modes of Pike fishing, are superior to any other,) and dace are the best baits; they must be kept alive in a tin kettle, with holes in the lid, and which in hot weather should be placed in the water.

The other live snap-hook is baited by the small hook being thrust through the fish beneath the back fin; and some use a piece of silk or thread doubled, hung on the point of the small hook, and brought under the belly of the bait, and tied on the other side to the shanks of the large hooks; care and expedition are required in doing this, otherwise the bait will be so injured as to be incapable of swimming briskly in the water: a cork float, the size of a common burgamot pear, with a small pistol bullet or two, not only to poise, but to keep the bait at a proper depth, which is from two to three feet. If a Pike be near where the bait is put in, it will come to the surface, or increase the quickness of its motion to avoid him; these signs will put the angler on his guard: when the boat is drawn under, allow it to be sunk considerably before striking, which, in all snap-fishing should be with a smart stroke, and directly contrary to the course the Pike appears to take; the line must be kept tight, and the landing-net should be used, as the throwing out a large Pike by force will certainly strain the sockets of the rod.

Some use only one large long-shanked hook, whipped to gimp, with a swivel at the upper end; the hook baited with a gudgeon under the back fin, or through the upper lip, with a float as above, that will swim the gudgeon; fish at mid-water, and allow a minute after the float is sunk before striking: by this method perch may be taken, if the bait be a winnow or very small gudgeon.

A variety of hooks are used for the dead snap; and this mode of catching Pike is well adapted to both shallow and deep waters, to the still rapid parts of the river, will take Pike at all seasons of the year, supposing the water and weather favorable; and it will be no trifling recommendation that the idea of cruelty, which the use of a live fish naturally impresses, is, by this substitute, completely removed. The rod should be longer than that for trolling; the line fine, strong, and twenty yards in length; the hook by some most preferred is like that for a common l e snap; the length of the gimp, on which the hook is tied, should be regulated by the size of the bait, and should be rather longer than the distance from the back fin to the mouth; that the looped end may be hung on a strong swivel, tied neatly to about a foot more of gimp, with a noose at the other end, to hang it upon the line, fastening a piece of lead, of the shape of a barley-corn, and weighing about an ounce, with a hole through it, about two inches above the swivel. The bait should be a middle sized dace: insert the baiting needle close behind the back fin, letting it come out of the mouth; draw the gimp to which the hook is tied after it; the short hook must stand with the point upright behind the back fin; the others will consequently be on each side; then hang it upon the swivel, and try if it will spin; if it does not move the bait a little to the right or left, which may be done without moving it from the hook: the whole success depends on its quick turning when drawn against the stream; and when it does, it appears like a fish unable to escape, and becomes too tempting a morsel for the Pike to resist: this method will not only enable the angler to fish a greater extent of water than the others, but is more certain to secure the Pike. The large ones, though bold in seizing the bait, are very cautious in gorging it: most trollers have experienced, that, after running out a considerable length of line, the bait has been numbled to pieces and deserted; a disappointment here remedied, for a Pike has but to seize the bait, and he is caught.

At both troll and snap, some persons have two or more swivels to their line; by which means its twisting is prevented, the bait plays more freely, and to the dead bait in rivers it certainly is an improvement: in ponds or still waters one will answer the purpose.

The Sporting Chronicle.

PEDESTRIANISM.

A match was made on the 5th instant between Jem Metcalf, of the Yorkshire runner, and Sam. Drinkwater, of Hartpury, near Manchester, for £50 a-side, to run once round Knutsford course, Metcalf giving Drinkwater 30 yards at starting. The money has been put down, and the match is to come off on the 28th inst. Metcalf will run Jem Hall, the crack quarter of a mile runner, the day after his match come off; and Ben Hart, of Bolton, the day after that, 600 yards, for 50 sovereigns each.

SPANISH GUN BARRELS.

Spanish barrels have always been held in great esteem, as well on account of the quality of the iron, which is generally considered the best in Europe, as because they possess the reputation of being forged and bored more perfectly than any others. It should be observed, however, that of the Spanish barrels, those only that are made in the capital are accounted truly valuable. They are proved with a treble charge of the best powder, and a quadruple one of swan or deer shot. At Madrid, and throughout all Spain, the manufacture of barrels is not, as in this and most other countries, a separate branch of the gun-making business, but the same workmen make and finish every part of the piece. Almost all the barrels made at Madrid, are composed of the old shoes of horses and mules, collected for the purpose. They are all welded longitudinally; but instead of being forged in one plate or piece, as in other countries, they are made, like the English twisted barrels, of five or six detached partitions, which are afterwards welded one to the end of another, two of them forming the breech, or reinforced part of the barrel. To make a barrel, which, rough from the forge, weighs only six or seven pounds, they employ a mass of mule shoe iron, weighing from forty to forty-five pounds; so that from thirty-four to thirty-eight pounds are lost in the heatings and hammerings it is made to undergo before it is forged into a barrel.

THE DEVIL'S FISHING.

"All the World's a Fish Pond."—Shakspeare.

What luck, old Clovenfoot, to-day?
Said I, one foggy morning,
As he threw out his line for prey,
Poor mortal folks suborning.

"Not much," quoth he, "but what I have,
Beyond dispute, is fair gain;
What notes to shave, I've caught a knave,
A miser with a bargain.

To catch a needy beau, I took
A draggle-tail'd surtout—
A would-be belle found on the hook,
Attempting full-dress suit."

What fish bite sharpest, Pug? says I,
"Why, as to that," quoth he,
"I find not many very shy,
Of high or low degree.

Your toper bites well at a cork,
[When there's a bottle to it,]
Your Jew will even bite at pork,
If he smells money through it.

Some shy ones play about the line,
Till prudence waxes feeble,
And those at last are often mine,
Who only meant to nibble?

There's few indeed, of small or great,
[Or I am much mistaken,]
But may, by some peculiar bait,
Be tempted and then taken."

FOXES.

We believe it is remarked that these animals are much more numerous in Ayrshire at present than for several years past; and of this and there well known dexterity and attachment to the poultry of the farmers they have given most unequivocal proofs in the frequent depredations recently committed on the neighboring henroosts. On several estates much care has been taken to presere Reynard exclusively for the "hunt," and this, together with the number of plantations affording abundant cover, now to be found in the districts of the county, no doubt accounts for their increase. But, notwithstanding of this care, and the proverbial cunning of the animal, which generally enables him to take care of himself—or in more homely language, "to make himself scarce" when danger is apprehended, it appears he sometimes falls in a much more ignoble manner than in the chase, when pursued from all his haunts by "hound and horn;" and of this, rather a remarkable instance occurred the other day. A terrier, belonging to a carter, while straying along the road side somewhere near Fullerton House, fell in with a fox, which, in place of flying from the dog, as, from the habits of the animal, was to be anticipated, unexpectedly turned upon him and gave him battle in the most courageous manner. The consequence was, they immediately seized each other, and the fox would certainly have been triumphant, but for the interferance of the carter, who ended the unequal contest by cruelly knocking poor foxy on the head with the shaft of his whip. It proved to be an uncommonly large female, and altogether as fine a specimen of the old Scotch fox as can be found.—Glasgow Courier, Dec.

A WIFE OF TWO HUSBANDS!

There is now living at Sandiacre, a woman who has married two husbands. They both live in the same village, and she, very conveniently, sometimes is found with one, and sometimes with the other, and amongst them all the greatest peace and harmony prevails!—Nottingham Review.
